Memorial to Dead Today

CHICAGO, May 30.—(UP)—Chicago police shot and killed four striking steel workers today in a fierce battle between 1,500 Communist for Industrial Organization unionists and 150 police outside the gate of the Republic Steel Corporation's South Chicago plant.

An estimated 88 other workers were injured in the 20-minute exchange of bricks and bullets. Twenty-eight policemen were reported injured.

Governor Henry Horner, in the city for a Memorial Day celebration, hastily summoned a conference of steel and union officials in an effort to learn whether martial law was necessary. Adjutant General Carlos E. Black, of the Illinois National Guard, sat in as observer.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly said at Eagle River, Wis., that he had full confidence in police ability to preserve order.

Workers Remain.

Republic is the only one of the three independent steel companies—Republic, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, and Inland Steel—against which the CIO is striking in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, which has attempted to continue production. A force of workers, guarded by city police, still remained in the South Chicago Republic works late tonight.

Only one of the dead had been identified tonight. He was Early Hanley, 40, of Indiana Harbor, Indiana.

The four dead, all reported to have died from gunshot wounds, were the first fatalities in the far-flung strike of steel workers in five states, which started last Tuesday night.

Two Die on Scene.

Two died before they could be taken to the Bridewell hospital, one was dead on admission to South Chicago hospital, and the fourth died a few minutes after reaching Burnside hospital.

The injured were distributed as follows:

Burnside hospital, 31 received, two believed dying.
Bridewell hospital, 16 received.

$250,000 Fire Razes Philadelphia Piers

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—(UP)—A $250,000 fire tonight destroyed a Baltimore & Ohio railroad pier on the Delaware river, spread to three boats and two adjoining piers and threatened a large portion of the Philadelphia waterfront before it was brought under control.

Wheat, cotton, oil and other cargo on the pier were consumed quickly by the flames which were watched by an estimated 10,000 persons. Two spectators were overcome by smoke but there were no other casualties reported.

Four alarms brought all available equipment in the vicinity and firemen battled for several hours before the blaze was brought under control.

GEORGE F. BAKER.

GEORGE F. BAKER, WEALTHY BANKER, DIES ABOARD YACHT

Chairman of First National and One of Richest Men in U. S. Succumbs After Operation.

NEW YORK, May 30.—(AP)—Jackson Reynolds, former president of the First National Bank of New York, today announced the death of George F. Baker, chairman of the bank, aboard his steam yacht Viking at Honolulu.

Reynolds said the news was conveyed to him in a telephone conversation with Landon Thorne, a member of the yachting party. Baker, reputedly one of the richest men in the United States, died at 11:47 a. m. (Atlanta time) Reynolds said.

Baker underwent an emergency operation for peritonitis on the yacht last Tuesday in the mid-Pacific.

Operation at Sea.

The operation was performed by Dr. Arthur R. Ambler, the 59-year-old physician's personal physician, aided by Dr. John Russell, Australian specialist, transferred to the yacht from the Canadian liner Niagara, in response to a call from the Viking.

Baker, who began to feel ill Tuesday when the vessel was 400 miles from Honolulu, was thought to be recovering after the operation.

The Viking, a 1,500-ton steam yacht, left here in the middle of February and went through the Panama canal to Honolulu, Tahiti, Fiji, and other South Sea islands and was on its way back.

The financier's wife flew from the mainland to the island to meet the yacht. She was accompanied by her cousin, J. Gordon Douglas, and former Republican National Committee Chairman Henry P. Fletcher.

Baker celebrated his 59th birthday on the yacht March 19. A medium-sized man with thin black hair, spectacles and smooth shaven, he was very shy of public attention. He resigned a year ago as director of the United States Steel Corporation, but when in New York went every day to carry on his duties at the bank.

He maintained homes here, at

CONFESSION MADE IN TORCH KILLING, OFFICERS REPORT

Indictment for Slaying
To Be Asked Tomorrow
of Fulton Grand Jury,
Says Assistant Solicitor;
2 Others Being Hunted.

TRIAL IN 2 WEEKS TO BE REQUESTED

Hammer, Freshly Dipped in Paint, Found in Garage; Empty Purses Recovered From Bedroom.

Milton Jackson, 35-year-old negro, has confessed the brutal slaying of Mrs. Birdie Plucker, Desk Sergeant Charles E. Lyle, of Fulton county police, told The Constitution yesterday.

Sergeant Lyle said Patrolmen John Carter and Jack Carroll had reported to him an oral confession had been obtained in the presence of themselves and three Fulton county deputy sheriffs.

Report Substantiated.

Patrolman H. H. Green also informed The Constitution that a confession had been obtained. He added that Jackson implicated another negro, who is now being sought for questioning. Jackson's wife, to whom he allegedly gave a knife, is also being sought, Patrolman Green said. Jackson, a former chauffeur for the Pluckers, was taken into custody three hours after Mrs. Plucker was bludgeoned to death in her newly purchased Peachtree Hills home Saturday afternoon. After the killing, her slayer saturated her body and the house with an inflammable liquid and applied a torch.

The residence was practically destroyed and Mrs. Plucker's body, crammed in a pantry and charred badly, was found in ruins of the home at 108 Rosanoke avenue.

Inquest Held.

Obtaining of the alleged confession preceded an inquest yesterday morning at Spring Hill, conducted by Coroner Paul Donehoo. Following the inquest, Jackson was ordered held for murder. Assistant Solicitor General E. A. Stephens, of Fulton superior court, announced he will seek a first-degree murder indictment tomorrow before the Fulton county grand jury, and that he will move for a trial two weeks from that time, the earliest date possible on the court calendar.

The inquest lasted two hours, and a new development came when Patrolman Claude Webb, of Fulton county police, testified he found a hammer near a paint bucket in the garage of the Plucker home. He testified that the hammer had been freshly dipped in white paint.

Lieutenant Jim Ragsdale, also of Fulton county police, testified that he found two purses, both empty, in the Plucker home. He said he found one on a dresser in a bedroom and another in a corner of the room.

Testimony was also given by R. M. Plucker, husband of the slain woman, who stated that Jackson owned the hammer, which he found in connection with some work done around the house. Plucker said that he gave Jackson money to buy certain materials.

Amelia Plans World Flight Start Tuesday

Aviatix To Use Same Ship
That Crashed in Honolulu.

MIAMI, Fla., May 30.—(AP)—Amelia Earhart has tentatively scheduled for Tuesday her take-off on a projected west-east flight around the world.

"If weather conditions are favorable, she probably will hop Tuesday morning for San Juan, Puerto Rico," her husband, George Palmer Putnam, said today.

Miss Earhart went aloft today for more than an hour for a final checkup on the plane's radio and compass. It is the same ship that crashed with her at Honolulu to terminate her first globe-girdling attempt which began in California and was to have been over a east-west route.

Decision to reverse the original route was announced by the famous aviatix last night. She said weather conditions in the Caribbean and over Africa probably would be more favorable now than in a few weeks, and it seemed advisable to cover that part of the trip first.

An equatorial route has been mapped by Miss Earhart. From San Juan she plans to follow the Pan-American Airways route to Natal, Brazil, from where she will cross the South Atlantic to Dakar, Africa. She will attempt to follow the Imperial Airways lane to Australia, thence aim for tiny Howland Island and Hawaii, stepping stones across the Pacific to the United States.

Miss Earhart has set no time schedule for herself, declaring she "will not rush."

WOMAN IS SLAIN, HOUSE SET AFIRE

20-Year-Old N. C. Mother
Is Bludgeoned; Leg of Boy Is Badly Burned.

MORGANTON, N. C., May 30.—(AP)—The body of Mrs. Ervin A. Stamey, 20-year-old mother, was found enveloped in flames in a burning shed at her home near here early today and Coroner Russell E. Green said she was killed with a blunt instrument before the bed was set afire.

The coroner quoted the victim's brother-in-law, Conley Stamey, whose family occupied half of the house, as saying he arrived home to find the blaze threatening to spread throughout the room in which Mrs. Stamey was alone with her two children.

Betty Jean Stamey, aged four years, was sleeping in a crib in a corner of the room, and was not touched by the flames, but Royce Ervin Stamey, eight-months old infant, was found lying on the floor a few feet from his mother's bed, and was badly burned on his left leg.

The coroner said an autopsy performed by Dr. John W. Ervin, county physician, and Dr. J. J. Kirksey, brought from them the opinion that Mrs. Stamey was killed by a blunt instrument before she was burned.

Sheriff Fred U. Ross said he questioned the slain woman's 22-year-old husband, an unemployed service attendant who was absent from home, and residents of the neighborhood for reports of any suspicious visitors or any possible motive.

Sheriff Ross said there was no evidence to indicate robbery was a motive. Conley Stamey was quoted by the sheriff as saying he returned home from Morganton about midnight.

ROOSEVELT WINS FIGHT TO SMASH REVOLT ON RELIEF

Not Muster Strength.

SHOWDOWN VOTE CALLED TOMORROW

Majority Leader Rayburn
Will Outline President's Views in Attempt To Heal Party Wounds.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(UP)—President Roosevelt appeared tonight to have won his fight to save the $1,500,000,000 work relief bill from rebellious, patronage-hungry house Democrats who succeeded in earmarking $505,000,000 of the fund for "pork" projects before the White House intervened.

The extent of Mr. Roosevelt's victory will be known Tuesday when the house is scheduled to take final action on the relief measure. Before the vote, Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, Democrat, Texas, will outline the President's views in an attempt to restore harmony and heal wounds which the relief fight has left among the Democrats.

Two Blocs Satisfied.

A compromise settlement of the dispute was worked out between Mr. Roosevelt and Rayburn before the chief executive departed for his Hyde Park, N. Y., home. It is reported to be satisfactory to Representative Alfred Belter, Democrat, New York, and Representative Joseph Starnes, Democrat, Alabama, leaders of two of the rebel blocs.

The proposal would extend PWA for two years and authorize the expenditure of $148,000,000 from the PWA revolving fund for projects located in states or communities which already have floated bond issues to meet their share of the costs involved. Belter led the fight to earmark $300,000,000 of the relief fund for PWA projects. Starnes, who sponsored the amendment to set aside $55,000,000 for flood control and water conservation projects, was assured that sufficient money would be available.

NON-UNION FIELD NEW CIO TARGET

Lewis' Organization Is Quick To Reply to AFL's
New Bid for Supremacy.

By the Associated Press.

A new challenge for supremacy in the labor world in America came yesterday from John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization when it was announced in Washington that the CIO would undertake a membership drive designed to enter every unorganized industry.

It was the CIO's reply to the American Federation of Labor's new bid for supremacy in the labor field, and it came from John Brophy, the CIO's director, who said the CIO would move into every industry which has no labor organization or where existing unions are "not taking care of their members." The organization, he added, had no intention of seeking a foothold in the building crafts or railway brotherhoods.

Meanwhile, at least 73,000 men remained idle as the seven-state steel strike went into the new week, and leaders in the many industries dependent upon steel for supplies, were represented as apprehensive of a crippling shortage of materials. Four were killed in a Chicago riot.

The magazine "Steel" said the closing of plans of the Republic Steel Corporation, Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company, and the Inland Steel Company, "has thrown the market into confusion, production and deliveries being stopped to a sufficient degree to cause apprehension among consumers."

Crashes at Montgomery.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 30.—(AP)—Russell C. Luquire, Birmingham burial insurance company executive, and Miss Frances Williams, a Montgomery young woman, were killed today when their airplane fell in downtown Montgomery. Luquire was 31.

The plane was rented at Montgomery municipal airport a short time earlier, and Luquire was at the controls.

Witnesses said the plane was flying low as it approached the spot where it crashed, indicating Luquire was in difficulty.

Screams of the woman, witnesses said, were heard, were audible on the ground.

The airplane fell in a small cleared space between two houses occupied by negroes. Axes were #### Mrs. Joe King Is First; Mrs. Sutton Second-Place Winner.

Brown-haired, brown-eyed Mrs. Joe King, of Bolton, won her second grand prize in feminine competition yesterday—this time it was in The Constitution-sponsored Women's Safe Driving Contest.

Her other prize-winning event had been in her high school popularity contest.

She received the announcement that she had won the coveted free week's vacation for two persons at Myrtle Beach and the $100 cash very calmly. Then she laughed softly, excitedly.

"I really think the men should take these tests now," she observed. "They, too, could do with a little driving education and fun."

Mrs. King drove the test cars through the five spectacular and difficult tests at Sears parking lot yesterday afternoon. Hers was the skill of an expert, the official scorers said. Her winning score was 84. A few minutes after she was announced as the grand prize winner she was asked to take the tests again just for the amusement of the large crowd of spectators. She did and this time, with the additional strain thus placed on her,

REICH NAVY ENDS ALL SHORE LEAVES

Hitler Confers With Military Leaders and Calls All High Government
Officials in Crisis.

By the United Press.

The Spanish civil war threatened to blaze into a conflagration engulfing all Europe yesterday following the bombing of a German battleship and the "reprisal" torpedoing of a Loyalist merchant vessel with 240 persons missing. Boiling with rage over bombing Saturday of the "pocket battleship" Deutschland by Loyalist airplanes with a loss of 23 lives and 83 wounded, Fuehrer Adolf Hitler flew to Berlin and called his military and naval chiefs of staff into conference.

All navy shore leaves were cancelled.

An official German government communique said, "The German government will know how to give an appropriate answer to this unheard-of provocation of the Spanish criminals." The government threatened to renounce her neutrality pledge and exact vengeance from "the Bolshevik murderers of Valencia."

Viewed As "Reprisal."

A day after the 10,000-ton battleship was bombed from the air, the Spanish merchant ship Ciudad de Barcelona was torpedoed and sunk near the Loyalist port of Barcelona. Loyalist authorities intimated the incident may have been an act of "reprisal." Officially, no attempt was made to connect the sinking of the 3,946-ton merchant ship with the bombing of the Deutschland, but Loyalists asserted the Spanish Rebels are not in possession of a single submarine of their own.

The Catalonian government announced that 50 passengers were drowned and many injured when the steamer went down. It blamed an Italian submarine. Possibility of a higher death toll was seen in reports that 300 were aboard the vessel and that only 60 had been accounted for early today.

The incidents sent wildfire alarm through European capitals where diplomats for months have been seeking to "quarantine" the bloody civil war and prevent it from spreading across the borders of Spain.

On Patrol Duty.

The Deutschland had been sent into Spanish waters with warships of Great Britain, France and Italy, to patrol the coastlines and prevent foreign aid—men, munitions and supplies—from reaching either Rebels or Loyalists.

Germany's announcement she will take "independent measures" against the Loyalists, who admitted that two of their planes dumped bombs on the Deutschland, caused alarm among envoys of 26 other nations represented on the non-intervention committee which meets today. It was believed Hitler might demand stern sanctions against the Loyalists—a demand which might cleave the non-intervention signatories dangerously into Fascists on one side and the Leftist and democratic powers on the other.

The situation—admittedly the worst of any of the many international complications growing out of Spain's "Little World War."

CUBAN HOUSE VOTES GENERAL AMNESTY TO EMPTY PRISONS

Act Would Apply to Ex-President Machado and Followers.

HAVANA, May 30.—(UP)—One of the most sweeping acts of amnesty legislation in modern history was adopted today by the lower house of the Cuban congress.

Thousands of prisoners and persons awaiting trial for all classes of common and political crimes committed before May 20, 1937 would be freed under its provisions.

Certain crimes of terrorism and kidnapping are not pardoned. However, the legislation would result in virtual emptying of Cuban jails and would relieve the jammed dockets of Cuban courts.

The bill provides full amnesty for exiled ex-President Gerardo Machado and at least 40 others who served in his cabinet; police officials jailed or awaiting trial for crimes ranging from murder downward would be freed. Death sentences and terms of life imprisonment presently held in abeyance, for both political and common crimes, would be commuted. The bill now goes to the senate where it is believed it will encounter strong opposition.

PRELATES PRESENT POPE WITH AUTO

Special Body Built on German-Made Car.

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, May 30.—(AP)—Pope Pius XI was given an automobile with gears and body designed especially for his comfort as a birthday present today. He will be 80 tomorrow.

The holy father, his face thinned by long illness, smiled brightly when he saw the car, stepped into it and sat down virtually without assistance.

"It is just what we wanted!" he exclaimed. "We probably will take the first drive in it on our 80th birthday tomorrow."

The automobile is not new, but was reconstructed for his birthday by Vatican prelates. It was made in Germany.

Island in Pacific Rocked by Quakes

PORT MORESBY, British New Guinea, May 31.—(Monday).—(AP)—Wireless dispatches received here today said serious volcanic eruptions and earth shocks have led to the evacuation of nearly all the population of Rabaul, on the Pacific island of New Britain.

Terrified natives as well as white residents were taken from the port.

None of the reports mentioned casualties. The wireless station at Rabaul was silent.

GEORGE F. BAKER DIES ABOARD YACHT

Locust Valley, Long Island, and at Tallahassee, Fla.

U. S. MAY RECEIVE $347,362,600 IN TAXES

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(UP)—The death of George F. Baker, New York banker, may enrich the government by as much as $347,362,600 through the federal tax on his estate, a treasury expert estimated tonight.

The estimate was based on reports that Baker was worth about $500,000,000. The estate tax on holdings of $500,000,000 and above was fixed at 70 per cent in the revenue act of 1935.

If reports as to Baker's wealth are correct, the tax may be enough to "help balance the budget," one official said.

SHREVEPORT, La., May 30.—(UP)—James Milton Kelson Jr., 2, was thrown from his father's arms and drowned in Ross lake today when their boat struck a wave while turning and capsized.

J. B. Kelley was piloting the boat and the two men searched for the child for several minutes before lake patrolmen arrived. The body had not been found early tonight.

three critical.

South Chicago hospital, 14 received, one critical.

South Shore hospital, five received.

Jackson Park hospital, 10 received, three in serious condition with gunshot wounds.

South Chicago police station, 12 held in cells suffering minor injuries from police riot clubs.

Third Attempt. The terrific fighting occurred as strikers, for the third time in recent days, sought to march to the main gate of the great plant, which has continued to operate in defiance of the strike.

Inflamed by speeches made by two organizers for the Committee of Industrial Organization, the strikers massed and marched four abreast toward the gates.

More than a block from the gates, on a narrow strip of waste land which was said to be the property of the steel company, Captain James Kilroy, of the Chicago police, waited with patrolmen estimated to number from 110 to 220.

Kilroy called upon the strikers to halt. Words were exchanged. A brick flew toward the police captain from the ranks of strikers.

Several witnesses said a patrolman, apparently nervous and acting without orders, drew his pistol and fired several times over the heads of the strikers.

Then, they said, other patrolmen drew pistols and fired both into the air and into the mass of strikers. They said they saw several men fall. Advancing police, with four-foot riot clubs, began hand-to-hand fighting with strikers.

Captain James Mooney, supervising police in the strike area, denied, positively, however, that police fired the first shots. He said a striker, with a pistol, fired first, and that police retaliated.

There was more than 10 minutes of furious fighting, in which police and strikers mingled in a wild melee using sticks and stones as well as fists.

Police believed they were rallying for another charge, and were given for the use of tear gas. The crowd 10 minutes later broke and ran for shelter, carrying many injured or blinded by gas with them.

Police Leaves Cancelled. Newspapersmen were not allowed near strike headquarters after the riot, and police kept their distance. All police leaves were cancelled. Several hundred patrolmen were massed at the plant and at near-by police stations.

Strike leaders have charged that Chicago police were being used as strikebreakers by the Republic Company, and that high

Wedding Bells Ring for Constitution Pair

Romance that began in offices of The Constitution culminated Saturday in marriage of Miss Fay Chambers, of the classified advertising department, and John Glover, of the art department. The couple was married at the home of Dr. Louis D. Newton, and a reception followed at the home of Howard Haire, classified advertising manager, and Mrs. Haire, at 1092 Colquitt avenue, N. E., where picture was taken.

Police officials were in pay of the company.

"The Republic Steel Company has a right to operate its plant as long as its workers want to stay on the job," Captain Mooney said. "We are going to protect these workers, and that's all there is to it."

Mass Meeting Today. Plans have been made for a huge Memorial Day meeting to be held tomorrow here by strikers and sympathetic laborers. Some sources said that a march of 20,000 men against the Republic plant had been planned to take place after that meeting, and that today's march was unplanned.

Today's was the first serious violence in the South Chicago steel area since shortly before the United States' entrance into the World War. At that time, the late Major General Leonard Wood marched into the area with troops.

Worms That Didn't Turn Lose War to 600 Hogs. BOWLING GREEN, Ky., May 30.—(AP)—Six hundred hogs repelled an invasion of thousands of army worms in the Oakland section of Warren county today. They ate the invaders.

Thousands of army worms, infested a 140-acre rye field on the farm of Estill Mansfield. They began a march toward a wheat field on the adjoining farm of Beckman Martin.

Farmer Martin said he thwarted the advance by turning 200 hogs into a lane between the fields. He said the hogs ate the worms as quickly as they crawled into the lane.

COLLEEN MOORE IS SAID TO HAVE RE-MARRIED. CHICAGO, May 30.—(UP)—Confirmation was sought tonight without success today of a report that Colleen Moore, former film star, has married again, this time to a Chicago broker, Homer F. Hargrave Sr., of the firm of E. A. Pierce & Co.

It was learned that a couple giving names similar to those of Hargrave and Miss Moore were married May 19 in Crown Point, Indiana.

The broker and Miss Moore have been friends for some time. Judy Hargrave, 6-year-old daughter of Hargrave, recently accompanied Miss Moore on a tour with her famous doll house.

NAZIS PLOT ACTION IN SHIP BOMBING

—was aggravated by the angry temper of Chancellor Hitler's Fascist ally, Premier Benito Mussolini, of Italy.

Grief turned to indignation among millions of Germans as the radio described the bombing of the cruiser.

Crowds gathered in the streets, talking angrily on the tragedy, and heightening the tension.

The Deutschland limped into Gibraltar last night with her dead.

Her foredeck bore the scars of the attack. Her swastika emblems flew at half-mast.

The injured were taken to the British military hospital.

The non-intervention committee probably will be told that "proper redress" for the German dead must be exacted from the Loyalists by "forceful international action."

Hitler learned of the bombing at Munich. He immediately conferred with Baron Konstantin von Neurath, Nazi foreign minister, and Admiral Erich Raeder, naval chief of staff who came to him by plane.

They then flew to Berlin together and went into conference with Commander General Hermann Goering, air force leader, and War Minister Werner von Blomberg.

The German radio announcers, before closing their descriptions of the Deutschland bombing with the playing of a slow funeral march, said:

"In conclusion the government communicates that, inasmuch as the Valencia (Loyalist) government has been twice warned not to fly over German ships, the Reich government finds itself forced after this new breach to take immediate measures of which it will advise the non-intervention committee."

A Valencia communique charged the Deutschland, standing 350 yards from Ibiza pier, opened fire on the two Loyalist planes with anti-aircraft guns while the latter were on a reconnaissance flight over the Balearic islands which are controlled by General Francisco Franco's Spanish insurgents.

The Loyalists asserted the Deutschland was in prohibited waters inasmuch as foreign warships engaged in international control must remain 10 miles from the Spanish coast.

Diplomats recalled a warning to the Valencia government Saturday night by Admiral von Eschel, chief of the German Mediterranean squadron, that he was prepared to take "counter measures" if Loyalist planes persisted in approaching German ships.

THOMAS ACCUSES HITLER, MUSSOLINI. Socialist Blames Them for Spain's Trouble.

PARIS, May 30.—(AP)—Norman Thomas, American Socialist leader, declared today that Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and Premier Benito Mussolini are waging war "with particular frightfulness" on the Spanish people "in a struggle which they themselves secretly fomented."

Thomas, three-time Socialist candidate for the presidency of the United States, accompanied by Mrs. Thomas, arrived in Paris after spending some time in Barcelona and Valencia on a visit to government-held Spain.

He asserted the Insurgent air bombardment of Valencia Friday, which occurred while he and Mrs. Thomas were there, was "an act of war by German and Italian flyers under the direct control of their governments."

"Almost certainly their base of operations is the Island of Majorca which now is in Italian hands," he said.

BALL WILL CONTEST SLATED FOR MONDAY. WASHINGTON, Ga., May 29.—In Richmond superior court Monday, William R. Wynne, of Washington, and John D. Moss, of New Orleans, will seek to set aside the will of Mrs. Frederick Ball Pope, involving approximately $500,000.

The plaintiffs, cousins of the former Wilkes county woman who died in Augusta a year ago, are alleging mental incapacity at the age of 90 when the contested document was signed.

After relatively small bequests were made to members of her husband's family, and a few friends, without mentioning either of the plaintiffs, Mrs. Pope left the remainder of the sizable estate in trust for the use of a young Washington woman and niece of the late Frederick B. Pope. After her death the estate reverts to an Augusta hospital.

The will was drafted by Federal Judge William H. Barrett, and his secretary was one of the witnesses.

Savants Annoy Pigs to Discover Cure for Jitters

ITHACA, N. Y., May 30.—(AP)—Cornell University today announced purchase of a 100-acre farm to raise "heebie jeebies," its population to be Achilles the pig, who has a nervous breakdown, Homer the goat, who has one too, and a flock of other animals who will imitate man's artificial civilization to discover the cause and cure of nerves, psychoses and delinquency.

Achilles and Homer broke down trying to eat under the annoying etiquette imposed by an electric buzzer. Sheep, representing the feminine contingent, went haywire, showing that sex is not the main cause of jitters.

The farm will make it possible to test the effects of heredity, now the No. 1 suspect in the "heebie jeebie" world. There for the first time will be bred generations of animals with nerves which can stand the gaff, and others which cannot.

By comparing the two kinds of nerve tissue, it is hoped to discover the secret of the kind that stands the stress of life.

The original idea came from Pavlov, the Russian psychologist. One of Pavlov's pupils, Dr. Howard Scott Liddell, has been in charge of preliminary work for 18 years.

CUMMING, Ga., May 30.—A youth was killed and two others slightly injured at about 5 o'clock this afternoon when the car in which they were riding overtook on Route No. 9, seven miles north of here.

The dead youth was Frank Holbrook, 20, of Cumming, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Holbrook. His injured companions were Hallam Durham and Cliff Thomas, who told police Holbrook lost control of the car.

Holbrook's skull was crushed when he was pinned under the vehicle. Besides his parents, he is survived by a brother and four sisters.

20 PERSONS POISONED BY CHATTANOOGA PIES. CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 30.—(AP)—Twenty persons, including 12 children, were treated today for what physicians described as food poisoning. All except four of the children were dismissed from hospitals. Their condition was not serious, doctors said.

A grocer in the neighborhood in which the 20 livers said he believed they were poisoned by pies sold from his store, since each family in which a poisoning occurred had purchased one of the pies.

GRIEF STRICKEN GIRL, 17, KILLS SELF WITH GUN. FORT MYERS, Fla., May 30.—(AP)—Police reported they found the body of Cecile Louis Lamb, 17, on a riverbank near here today with a bullet through her heart. A pistol lay near the girl.

Peace Justice Roy Lamberton said the death was suicide.

A note was found in the girl's pocket and told of her intent to kill herself because of grief over the death of a crippled brother three months ago.

WE GROW HAIR. THE above pictures of Thomas client Leo Stack show how Thomas re-grows hair even in extremely serious cases of baldness. This is an "alopecia areata" case and is considered unusually baffling by most authorities. The Thomas' have hundreds of such cases each year and have consistently, without a single failure, re-grown hair.

Loss of hair due to dandruff may make you just as bald as loss of hair from alopecia areata, or from any of the other 14 local scalp ills. Regardless as to the cause of your hair-loss, you must have highly specialized knowledge and treatment applied if you are to expect satisfactory results. The Thomas know how to treat effectively all of the 14 local causes of baldness. They know how to end dandruff, how to stop falling hair, and how to promote hair growth on thin and bald spots.

HEAT SOARS IN ATLANTA!

ME: Great Scott—the thermometer's up another 5°! And everything I drink to cool me makes me feel hotter than ever afterwards. This hot spell's getting me 'way down. And the nights are as bad as the days.

LATER AT HOME

ME: You're right, Helen! Tea is different! Tasted swell—cooled me off—and I'm still feeling cool. I'll have another!

SHE: I'll have to make up a pitcher of iced tea every morning.

ME: Brother, I'm not foolin' when I say that iced tea is the best hot-weather cocktail there is! It keeps me cool all day—and at night-time I rely on tea to help me get to sleep. Tea puts me to sleep feeling I'm up at the North Pole. Any time you want to beat the heat—just do what I do. Drink plenty of iced tea!

DOCTORS SAY—
"The difference between tea and other so-called cooling drinks is this: Tea does more than merely quench thirst. Tea actually lowers the body temperature. Its effect is more lasting."

"Exploring jungles is no holiday hike. It takes vitality and vigor. That's why explorers always carry tea and plenty of it. I can qualify as a first-hand authority on beating the heat. The way I do it is drinking tea. There's nothing like tea to get you cool, and keep you feeling that way."

FRANCE WILL OFFER ARMS CUT PROPOSAL AT GENEVA TODAY

Daladier Reveals Plan at American Memorial Day Gathering.

PARIS, May 30.—(AP)—Edouard Daladier, France's vice-premier and minister of national defense, told an American Memorial Day gathering today his government was preparing to make new proposals for world limitation, reduction and control of armaments. France's move will be made at Geneva, Daladier disclosed in a speech at the dedication of an American expeditionary force chapel at Suresnes cemetery, on the outskirts of Paris.

He spoke from a stand in the midst of 154 flower-decked graves of American World War dead. Diplomatic quarters here said that the French proposals will be initiated at Geneva tomorrow by Joseph Paul Boncour.

Seven A. E. F. chapels were inaugurated in the most extensive Memorial Day ceremonies ever held in France.

General John J. Pershing, commander of the A. E. F. and now chairman of the American Monuments Commission, dedicated the new chapel at Romagne Sous Montfaucon in the heart of the Argonne battlefield, where 14,255 American soldiers are buried in the largest of the A. E. F. cemeteries.

QUARTET WILL EXPLORE UNCLIMBED MOUNTAIN

BOSTON, May 30.—(AP)—Youthful Bradford Washburn swung aboard a train tonight en route for Alaska determined to climb the hitherto unconquerable Mt. Lucania.

Last year Washburn surveyed the hitherto uncharted St. Elias range. One of the aerial shots disclosed an unexplored pass up the 17,150-foot mountain. It is up that pass Washburn intends to lead his expedition.

Spread of Soil Conservation Work Is Seen by State Experiment Head

Applications for State Board Services on Hand, Says Member, Pointing to Alertness of Georgia Farmers and Landowners to Necessity.

Dr. H. P. Stuckey, head of the Georgia experiment station at Experiment, predicted yesterday a widespread acceptance of soil conservation practices under direction of a new state board.

Proper conservation of soil, he said, is the chief problem facing Georgia agriculture.

A member of the four-man commission which will assist in the formation of voluntary soil conservation districts, Dr. Stuckey said several applications for aid of the body already have been received.

Farmers Receptive.

"At the present time, farmers are 'soil conservation conscious' and the movement to improve Georgia's land is at its height," he said.

"The time is ripe for the commission to begin its work, I believe, and I feel that it will meet full co-operation from landowners throughout the state."

Dr. Stuckey said he did not attribute the depletion of Georgia's soil in the past to the tenant system employed widely in farming, but rather to a "general economic condition under which prices were low and the farmers just didn't have the money for conservation practices."

"Just as people will send their children to school as long as they have sufficient money," he explained, "so will farmers improve their land if they have sufficient funds."

Federal money—the amount not yet determined—will be available in Georgia for expenditure through voluntary conservation program, he said.

Foresees Great Benefit.

"I feel that the program will result in rebuilding the soil in wide areas throughout the state and that farmers will receive great benefits from the system," he held.

Under the 1937 act creating the commission, it will require a petition of 25 landowners before the body will consider the execution of conservation plans.

After the petition is filed, an election for the area affected is held, and if a majority of landowners so votes, the commission authorizes election and appointment of a group to direct farm practices for the district.

Planters in the district likewise vote on the program to be put into effect, and the entire system, Dr. Stuckey said, "is thoroughly democratic."

The formation of districts probably will follow watersheds or other natural districts, he explained, with some districts including as many as six counties.

Little Difficulty Expected.

While the commission will be empowered with some coercive authority in the districts to force farmers to follow conservation practices, Dr. Stuckey said he anticipated little need for such authority on the expressed belief "public sentiment will force compliance."

The commission will have no authority except in those districts where a favorable election has been held, he explained, and would find little need for forcing conservation practices except where one farmer's lack of interest in conservation could result in damage to other planters through drainage onto their lands, or in some other manner.

He said the numerous inquiries he has received concerning the program indicate a large number of districts will be formed.

truth, and it would seem to people of ordinary intelligence that the sensible thing to do would be to find out how many employable people are unemployed."

Golden, in a short address, said the theater must look to schools and universities for development. He said the road, "despite the nonsense of super-optimists," is nearly gone. He suggested the entire institution of the theater needs reorganizing.

Theater Situation.

"Most of the theater buildings in the smaller cities have been either torn down or fallen to decay," Golden said. "The fact that four or five of our first line stars and about the same number of New York hits find it possible to make a successful road tour is no reason to believe in the fool propaganda of the rejuvenation of the road."

"The graduation ceremonies were held in the Erlanger theater. A total of 87 students were graduated from the various departments of the university.

DULUTH YOUTH SLAIN; TOWN MARSHAL HELD

DULUTH, Ga., May 30.—A youth identified as Chess Mills, 21, was shot and killed with one of six bullets allegedly fired by Rube Garmon, town marshal, at about 8:15 o'clock last night near the Southern railway station, according to Sheriff J. P. Mason, of Gwinnett county.

Sheriff Mason said Garmon was lodged in the county jail at Lawrenceville, but that no charge had been placed against him. The shooting occurred as he was trying to arrest Mills, who had been drinking and cursing.

The shooting occurred a short time before arrival of a train from Atlanta and was witnessed by several persons. Mills is survived by his parents and several brothers and sisters.

SPYING FOR HITLER DENIED BY WALLY

tory as any other of the celebrated chateaux whose names will live in romantic Touraine forever—the woman whose girlhood was passed in that Maryland as Wallis Warfield.

Cruel Detractors.

Like Mary Stuart, whose youth was passed in Touraine, Wallis Warfield has also had her cruel detractors. Indeed, had not she caused one of the Scottish queen's most adored descendants to follow in Mary's own footsteps, and to follow the choice of his heart, rather than the icy but dignified roads of state?

The British empire lost its best-loved Edward VII, and, as most people saw it at first impact, merely for the sake of Wallis Warfield acquiring a third husband. The two things seemed so immeasurably unequal.

The universal impulse was to make the woman the scapegoat—nay, even to thrust her into a crueler outer darkness than the kingly exile.

Was She Not Eve?

Was she not the Eve who once more had proffered temptation to the man?

Could there be anything too contemptuous to say about her?

Would any cynic ever be adequate to a situation of matrimonial disaster unparalleled in the world's history?

Was she not the Cleopatra, lustful and base, who once again had lured the gallant Roman Anthony away from empire to his doom?

Wallis Tells Truth.

Corrections as to personal facts now to be stated have been furnished by Wallis Warfield herself, beginning on that rainy day when I first found her quietly in the library at the Chateau de Candé.

I sought her out because blood is thicker than water, and stronger than tattling tongues—for she and I, going back far enough, have one common line of ancestral stock, although the relationship is certainly distant.

To cut out irrelevances about the first two marriages of Wallis Warfield, it was she herself who applied to have both dissolved.

Proctor Proves Conduct.

Moreover, the unexpected intervention made by a solicitor's clerk drew the floodlight of the most searching detection possible at the hands of the king's proctor upon her personal purity of conduct, as was definitely stated by His Majesty's attorney-general.

No guilty aspect could be traced by the king's proctor's experienced employees in the friendship between herself and King Edward VIII.

No reason, in fact, ever existed for the high court of England to tell her that she must be refused relief at its hands because of not having come into it with her own conduct clean and above reproach.

The result of that intervention should settle forever the allegation that she was the king's mistress, whom he desired to "turn into an honest woman"—as the phrase goes—by subsequent marriage.

So much for that.

Spikes Fascism Charge.

Now for the second trump card triumphantly thrown upon the false by her slanderers. She was, the French press stated some months ago, the chosen tool by which, if she had had the crown of England placed upon her brow, "Hitler's Germany would have been installed at the court of St. James."

Or, as a popular British weekly periodical phrased it:

"Fascism suffered its worst blow when, without a tremor, Great Britain and the vast dominions overseas said good-bye to one king and loyally acknowledged his successor. . . . Fascism tried to raise its head. . . . There was a Fascist-minded group trying to surround the king. . . . All sorts of people induced Edward VIII to challenge the right of parliament."

All this highly chivalrous comment is founded on a baseless rumor that Wallis Warfield was a frequent of the society of the German ambassador Herr von Ribbentrop, and his entourage.

No Friend of Envoy.

During these days of waiting at Candé she has been quietly searching her memory for whatever could have originated such a belief.

"I cannot recall ever being in Herr von Ribbentrop's company more than twice—once at a party at Lady Curzon's before he became ambassador, and once at another big reception. I was never alone in his company, and I never had more than a few words of conversation with him—simply the usual small talk, that is all," she informed me. "I took no interest at all in politics."

Gifts of Jewelry.

A third group of stories centers around jewelry, dress, and immense luxury. Those surrounding Nero or Caligula could have taken lessons in prodigality from Wallis Warfield if one could credit it all the tales floating about of this nature to her discredit.

There could hardly have been a state jewel left in London when she set out for France.

Her innumerable precious stones, set in all manner of marvelous and costly ways, could outvie the splendors of India.

The ex-king had, among other priceless squanderings of treasure, given her all the magnificent jewelry which the late Queen Alexandra had left him!

Indeed, the patrician ladies of England had felt their feelings outraged by seeing her wearing them!

The pearls and stones once consecrated to Alexandra upon the neck of Wallis Warfield!

Facts Belle Stories.

A few hard, cold, facts stand in the way of this concatenation of lies.

In the first place Queen Alexandra's collection of jewelry was—for a queen—none too remarkable.

In the second, the Duke of Windsor never at any time in his life inherited any jewelry from any member of the royal family.

Thirdly, by no sort of route, through him or otherwise, has Wallis Warfield ever been in possession of any jewelry ever owned by the late Queen Alexandra.

Such jewelry as she has is of conservative taste and no extraordinary value.

"My few stones," as she describes them. "It is true I have a few nice pieces, but not anything to compare in quality or quantity with what really rich women possess," she told me.

Trousseau Not Unusual.

"And what of all the gossip about the wonderful trousseau?" I asked her. "Am I asking too much?"

"Not at all," she answered. "The truth is so simple. I am ordering just my usual spring outfit. I like to have half a dozen good things at a time and wear them straight off until they are finished with."

"As to coronet-embroidered pajamas! I have never ordered or had any. I even dislike seeing women walk about at seaside resorts in them, and so far as coronets go, I've never even seen one."

DUKE, WALLY PACK FOR HONEYMOON

Edward Will Make a Speech Before Wedding.

MONTS, France, May 30.—(UP)—The Duke of Windsor announced tonight he will make a "speech" at his wedding breakfast next Thursday and will toast his bride, her grace the Duchess of Windsor, in champagne.

The spokesman for the famous lovers, Herman L. Rogers, of New York, gave no clue as to what the Duke would tell his 17 wedding guests when they gather after the ceremony to drink and cut the wedding cake.

Edward and his bride-to-be, Mrs. Wallis Warfield, apparently blissfully happy despite the action of the crown in depriving her of royal status, joyfully packed their trunks in preparation for their honeymoon.

Mrs. Warfield joked and laughed with others at the chateau as she put her extensive wardrobe in order and supervised the packing of her trunks.

sumers supplied from the affected mills."

Steel Plant Closed.

In the Chicago area, the employees of an independent South Chicago foundry, estimated by the concern's vice president, Charles Swab, to number 260, walked out to join the ranks of the striking steel workers from three neighboring plants. J. L. Pickering, foreman of the company, the Valley Mold and Iron Corporation, said the plant workers were members of the CIO and that the issue was a proposed contract with the union. The matter of wages and hours, he added, was not involved.

From Detroit came the prediction by members of the United Automobile Workers of America that there would be no strike at the main plant of the Ford Motor Company at Detroit this summer.

The explanation for this prediction was that the "summer slump" in automobile production had already begun and that a strike during the slack season would have relatively little effect on output, but a prolonged shutdown might tend to demoralize the union forces.

The group led by Representative Wilburn Cartwright, Democrat, Alabama, who successfully earmarked $150,000,000 for highway and grade crossing elimination work, still remain to be satisfied.

Cartwright, chairman of the house roads committee, will call his group into session at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday to determine on a course of action.

The rebels in this bloc, however, the United Press learned, are resigned to defeat. They admitted tonight that they could not muster sufficient votes to win without the support of the flood control and PWA blocs. Another factor operating against them is the emphasis Democratic leaders are placing upon the necessity of party members abandoning the revolt and presenting a united front.

ROOSEVELT ARRIVED AT HYDE PARK HOME.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., May 30.—(AP)—President Roosevelt arrived here by special train today to spend the Memorial Day holidays at his ancestral home. He found conditions ideal for roughing it and resting in the warm sunshine. It was his first visit to his rambling stone and stucco home on the Hudson since election day.

He will stay three days.

The President found his 82-year-old mother rapidly recovering from a broken ankle suffered a month ago.

The body of an unidentified negro woman about 20 years old was removed early last night from No. 1 reservoir of the city waterworks, off Howell Mill road, near Bishop street. The body apparently had been in the water 12 hours.

Fred L. Grennor, of 1293 Howell Mill road, waterworks employee, said his brother-in-law, J. T. Watkins, of 275 Fourteenth street, grappled for the body after its discovery by Allen Powell, 14, of 1241 Howell Mill road.

James McBee, 22, of 168 Green street, told police he heard a woman's screams coming from the reservoir vicinity at about 2 o'clock yesterday morning.

WHY MADRID STANDS

Ernest Hemingway, who spent several months in besieged Madrid as the correspondent of the North American Newspaper Alliance, tells the story of Hipolito, chauffeur during the worst of the Rebel bombardment for a group of American newspapermen. It is characters such as Hipolito, Mr. Hemingway writes, which explain why Franco never took Madrid when he had the chance. He describes the chauffeur as follows:

He was our chauffeur in Madrid and at the front during a 19-day bombardment of the capital that was almost too bad to write anything about. All the time he was as solid as the rock he looked to be cut from, as sound as a good bell and as regular and accurate as a railway man's watch. He made you realize why Franco never took Madrid when he had the chance. Hipolito and the others like him would have fought from street to street, and house to house, as long as any one of them was left alive; and the last ones left would have burned the town. They are tough and they are efficient. They are the Spaniards that once conquered the western world. They are not romantic like the anarchists and they are not afraid to die. Only they never mention it. The anarchists talk a little bit too much about it, the way the Italians do.

The world has wondered at the long-drawn defense of beleaguered cities in war-torn Spain. It is apparent the Rebels, battling to capture these places, have had the aid of tens of thousands of Black Shirts from Italy and of Nazis from Germany. They have had on their side air squadrons of bombing and fighting planes manned by the pick of Hitler's and Mussolini's air warriors. They have had heavy artillery and ample war materials. Yet neither Madrid nor Bilbao has fallen.

Perhaps, by studying the type of Spaniard Mr. Hemingway describes, the world will understand better the fierce determination that has strengthened the arms of the government forces in Spain.

"He said," reports Hemingway, "when I asked him what he believed in, that he believed in the republic."

The correspondent describes a bombardment so severe it turned the Gran Via, the combination Fifth Avenue and Broadway of Madrid, into a rubble-strewn, hole-pitted, blood-drenched shambles. Hipolito had been in the automobile, parked on a side street. That street had been the target for a recently arrived high explosive shell. Hipolito was lying with his head on the back of the driver's seat and they thought him dead. He moved and wiped away a yawn with the back of his hand.

"I am always accustomed to sleep after lunch if I have time," he explained.

When the time came for Hemingway to leave Madrid he tried to give Hipolito some money, but the sturdy little Spaniard refused. "Listen," he said, "we had a good time, didn't we?"

And Hemingway concludes his story of Hipolito with the remark: "You can bet on Franco, or Mussolini, or Hitler, if you want. But my money goes on Hipolito."

MORE TO SPEND

Average weekly earnings of industrial wage earners have increased, since 1914, at a much greater rate than the cost of living, according to figures made public by the National Industrial Conference Board. Based upon actual purchasing power, wages today are 48 per cent higher than in July, 1914.

This means that the domestic market for goods produced has increased tremendously for the period cited. Despite depressions, wars, labor troubles and other disruptions in the orderly process of industrial advance, the long view demonstrates the truism that increased earning power means increased buying power. In turn, larger buying power adds to the demand for goods and thus completes the cycle back to further gains in earning opportunity.

Average weekly earnings have jumped 111 per cent, now being $26.76 compared to only $12.68 in July, 1914. When the factor of the shorter working week is considered, the increase is still more remarkable.

The worker today averages only 41.4 hours per week, compared to the old figure of 51.5 hours, thus making his scale of hourly pay 162 per cent higher than in 1914. The average hourly pay scale for all industry today is 64.6 cents, compared to the 1914 scale of 24.7 cents. The increased ability of the wage earner to buy food, clothing and other goods and services is reflected in increased demand for the products of his toil.

15,000 NEW GEORGIA HOPES

Now comes that season of the year when young Georgians, 15,000 strong, with the inspiration of commencement addresses ringing in their ears, lay aside the textbooks of school and turn with eager confidence to assume the roles of productive citizens of the state.

Other thousands emerge from halls of higher learning in the colleges and universities to bear their predestined share of the complex burden of modern social life.

In these bright, clean, ambitious boys and girls lies the state's greatest wealth and greatest hope for a better future. Youth must not be scornful, at first, of the humbler roles in the professional, industrial and commercial worlds. Youngsters raw from school cannot expect to fill posts of responsibility until they have demonstrated full fitness.

Yet, in the roles they are now fitted to fill, they infuse a new enthusiasm into the business of life and rejuvenate the aspirations of man. To them, in years to come, will be entrusted the reins of all Georgia's affairs and in the bright confidence of their eye lies the promise of a better Georgia than preceding generations have ever known.

In the past too many of Georgia's youth, graduating from high school and college, have stepped beyond the boundaries of the state to find their destined niche in life. Opportunity for the best must be found in Georgia. They must be induced to stay in their native state and, inspired by deep-rooted love for her red clay hills and coastal plains, give of their talents to make her, in very truth, the Empire State of the South.

WILL THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY SPLIT?

Since the overwhelming Democratic victories of 1932, it has been predicted by many commentators that the party would split, with one wing liberal and the other conservative.

These commentators hold that President Roosevelt would draw liberals of the Republican party into the Democratic party and that conservatives of his own party would effect a new alignment of conservatives.

Such a lineup has not come about as yet. Even though men like Senators Glass, Byrd, Bailey, Smith, of South Carolina, and others do not believe in the New Deal, still they continue to stay under the Democratic banners, and while Borah, Johnson and even McNary are more in sympathy with President Roosevelt's policies they have not forsaken the Republican fold.

But the chances of the realignment along liberal and conservative lines today are improving. The present court battle makes it the more probable.

In an article "Whose Party Is It?" in the Saturday Evening Post, Stanley High contends that the Democratic party will go liberal. He says in part:

It is my firm conviction that before the 1938 congressional elections Mr. Roosevelt will be found to have chosen to stand with the liberals. He does not like the company of the Old Guard. He does not share their point of view. He will line up with the liberals, not because they have a stronger political hold on him—their political hold is negligible—but because the President, at heart, is a liberal.

It is commonly conceded that Mr. Roosevelt will be in a position to name the 1940 Democratic candidate. And the nomination of a liberal would mean the defeat and, probably, the political extinction of the Old Guard Democrats. It would mean the perpetuation of the economic liberalism begun under Mr. Roosevelt. The Democratic party, in that case, would admittedly be the liberal party.

Just how long such a party could hold the solid south is difficult to forecast—certainly not permanently—for the Democratic party of the solid south is anything but liberal. It is likely that this defection would be more than offset by the increased liberal strength in the cities of the north and in the western farm areas, and by the permanent addition to the party's strength of a majority of the northern negro vote.

At any rate, Mr. Roosevelt is convinced that the Democratic party—despite the conservatism of the solid south—can become genuinely a liberal party. I believe it is his aim to make it that, even though, in the process, the party suffers a temporary weakening. Because he believes in economic liberalism, his influence will be exerted to develop a new, if still nominally a Democratic, party that is fit to be its custodian.

If the Democratic party goes liberal, as Mr. High believes, it is likely that we will have a two-party system in the south. This would mean a new and more healthy political era in this section, with less emphasis being placed on personalities in political campaigns and more on issues.

Editorial of the Day

SCHOOL OF GOVERNMENT

(From the Greenville Piedmont.)
Harvard has announced plans for a new school of public administration, which is to be financed by an individual gift of $2,000,000. Numerous officials of both state and federal government have been called in to help answer the question: "What is the best and most practical service which Harvard's new school can render?"

In seeking to answer this question still another has been asked: "Do theorists really know more of any subject than the men of action and practical experience in the field?"

The second question is not a difficult one. The theorists know how public affairs should be administered. The "men of action" in politics and government know how they are administered.

If Harvard can get together a well-balanced faculty properly representative of both groups, there is no apparent reason why the new school should not render a service that is both acceptable and greatly needed at the present time.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON.

SIMPLICITY WASHINGTON, May 30.—The stand of the house against President Roosevelt's spending freedom has been widely misinterpreted. It has been called a personal repudiation of the President, an economy move, a Democratic party split and several other things, which it isn't.

To understand congress, you need only to understand human nature. The basis behind most congressional actions will be found in such primitive instincts as self-protection and self-preservation. The simple reason why those legislators voted to earmark one-third of Mr. R.'s $1,500,000,000 for relief is because they want to be sure to get as much as they can for their home districts.

The house is up for re-election next year. Mr. Roosevelt is not. Neither is the cordially disliked (in congress) spender Harry Hopkins. If Mr. Hopkins has complete freedom in spreading the dough in a congressional campaign year, the manna may not fall where politically oppressed legislators need it. Specifically, the re-election of a legislator from the unimpeached district of Timbuctoo may depend more on whether he was able to get a dam built in Tricking creek with federal money than upon his votes in congress.

Naturally, they want to earmark those $300,000,000 for FWA, $55,000,000 for flood control and water conservation construction, and $150,000,000 for highway and grade crossings. They want to get theirs.

The rebels undoubtedly were emboldened to their self-assertiveness by diminishing awe of the White House. Some of them liked the idea of offering an outburst of resentment against the way they have been treated under the new order.

At heart, they are not really so much against the President personally on this issue, but rather against his subordinates. For example, they do not like to see any of these independent bureau chiefs downtown making over $10,000 a year, because this is all they make. They cut CCC Director Fechner from $12,000 a few weeks before they cut Mr. Hopkins.

All in all, it shows congressmen are beginning to look out for their own skins. They realize the Roosevelt coat tails may not be sufficiently strong to provide another smooth free ride to re-election. In turn, this means a further step toward the return of normal relations between the executive and legislative branches of government.

Note—House Floor Leader Rayburn distinguished himself in handling the rebels with tact. His nickname now has become "Shepherd" Rayburn, or "Shep" for short, because of the common sense, kindness and concern he exhibited for his wandering flock. This alone caused delay of final action until Tuesday.

UNWILLING TACITURNITY

They said he would do it, but Senate Judiciary Chairman Henry Ashurst has not given the newspapers one of his delectable interviews on the righteousness of court packing for ten days (or rather had not when this column went to press). The secret is he is doing it on a bet.

A friend of his downtown bet the senator he could not avoid comment for 60 days. An exemption was granted, allowing him to make speeches on the floor, but no newspaper comments. Bookmakers are offering 10 to 1 that the widely liked senator will not last out the 60 days.

FASCISM?

Pharaoh Henry Wallace, the agriculture secretary, does not like to have anyone suggest that his strong agriculture control methods were taken from Italy, Germany or Russia. It is all right to say he took them from Egypt (under a King) or China (under ward lord economy), but not from the dictators.

"If this, that nothing like this," he said to a house committee, "has been tried in any other country, although the holding of surpluses has been tried."

Asked directly if European nations (no names mentioned) did not have similar control features, he replied: "Not like this."

With such cautious language, Mr. Wallace kept himself accurate, but he neglected to add that Germany, Italy and Russia have all invoked control features, but "not like" benefit payments, ever-normal granary, control of production or marketing if necessary through penalty taxes, etc., which are all rolled into this one pending bill. The essential difference, however, is that the dictatorships do it with a mailed fist, while Mr. Wallace has covered his hand with a democratic glove containing a honeyed handout.

Mr. Wallace has developed into the best politician of the new order.

COMPROMISE A national dry organization has been negotiating with Washington hotels for their annual convention arrangements. They wanted to find a hotel which does not have a bar. When that proved futile, they made an arrangement whereby their large headquarters hotel here would remove its "tap-room" sign during the convention. However, drinks will be served there as usual.

You've seen an auto turn turtle,

The Season Of Movie Optimism.

At this time of the year the producers of screen entertainment have a custom of gathering together all their sales forces for conventions. They meet, maybe in Hollywood, maybe in New York, maybe in Atlantic City or maybe somewhere else. They dine and are entertained. Bright stars of the moment in their own particular firmament are presented and seek to add to the general glory. There are pep talks galore by heads of departments and executives. There are advance screenings of forthcoming picture releases and there is the big annual banquet to headline the program.

From these gatherings come the mimeographed announcements from each studio, that tell what pictures they are making during the coming year. These sheets of enthusiasm reach the desks of all the movie editors of all the magazines and all the newspapers in the country. Many of them are passed along, in type, for public consumption.

They Create Considerable Glow.

What a glow of glad optimism those announcements generate! Each year promises the ultimate in glamorous screen entertainment. There are to be classics and thrillers, romances and comedy and drama and mystery and some films that combine 'em all. There are to be fascinating new short subject series and there are to be films that make your mouth water with desire.

And, oddly enough, each year does bring some advances in film entertainment. A few productions come forth upon the world each year that surpass, in entertainment, in artistry and in all-around general excellence, all that have gone before.

Thus the industry—occasionally, the art—advances. It is, of necessity, slow. You can't expect miracles, even in Hollywood. But amusement purveyed does improve and gradually we are made aware that utopia where everyone shall go to the movies, not for duty or not by mistaken desire, but to truly find enjoyment.

This year, according to most indications, is to see the greatest step forward yet in colored pictures.

First came motion. Then sound. Now color. Next will be three dimensional screens. And then, shortly, we won't be able to distinguish between real flesh and blood entertainment and the synthetic.

But if only the enthusiastic promises of one year could be realized in full, if the hopes aroused by those mimeographed announcements could come true, —the entertainment millenium would be here within the twelve-month.

Do You Consider England "Slow"?

Far be it from me to precipitate an argument, but I was wondering, as I saw the new trolley wires installed along Alabama street for the forthcoming "trackless trolley," how many Atlantans have been in the habit of thinking America is a place far ahead of the rest of the world in modern methods of transportation, and other things? How many of you think of England as way behind the times, according to American standards, in her ways of life?

Just wondering how you'd compare an English city with this Atlanta of ours!

For, you see, I rode on trackless trolleys in a number of English cities and towns when I was over there, the last time, in 1925.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEILER.

Resenting NEW YORK, May 30. Evasions Resenting evasions of the income tax law, both legal and illegal, Mr. Roosevelt will ask congress to take steps, but it is very doubtful that the inquiry will result in the application of the law to all incomes from whatever source derived.

The millions of public employees, including the President himself, will continue to enjoy their immunities; labor unions will suffer no such prying inquiry as employers must endure, and religious organizations which frankly engage in propaganda, and otherwise attempt to influence legislation and thus the government, will remain above a law, which congress passes but nobody in Washington has the temerity to enforce.

As a federal employee at $75,000 a year, the President, though a citizen of New York state, is exempt from a state income tax, which applies to his fellow-citizens of the state earning as little as $100 a month. Likewise exempt are all those senators, congressmen, federal judges, collectors, commissioners, marshals and miscellaneous high-salaried patriots in the national service who live in the 32 states having income taxes.

This exemption and the reciprocal immunity of state, county and federal employees from the federal income tax, rests upon decisions of the supreme court, which seem to thwart the intention of the laws, but while the New Deal is in a mood to destroy the judgment of the nine old men on certain matters, the administration has been vitally acquiescent in this curious interpretation.

Political Delicacy

Labor unions present a problem which would fascinate the treasury and bring the catch-polls on the run with handcuffs clanking at their belts if the same income fell to other recipients. They keep their own secrets, however, although many of them are notoriously predatory and brutal toward their subjects, and a fine sense of political delicacy prevents any inquiry into the ultimate destination of millions of dollars in dues, fines and plain, undisguised tribute wrung from the pay envelopes of the forgotten man for whom such tender regard may sometimes be detected in the fire-side chats of Mr. Big.

The dictators and granters of organized labor have plundered the forgotten man who, in some cases, inquires into union matters only at the risk of his livelihood or even his life, and for craft and arrogance they have nothing to learn from the soulless corporations in the heyday of the G. O. P. But a labor union is a dictator in a great, altruistic revolution, and it would be unwise to trick him in the same way that the agents go through the utterly bad American citizen whose ownership of a tax-paying business is convincing proof of bad character and criminal intent.

In demanding more severe treatment of the tax-evader Mr. Roosevelt will not call special attention to labor union income nor to that of institutions which accumulate enormous wealth, but give no assurance that the same is applied to religious purposes, and openly flout the clause against interference with the legislative function.

Members Labor, including the Of Labor of the rank and file, but not the sacred and docile members, would accuse the President of turning against the toiler, although such an inquiry would be plainly in his benefit. And, in religion, he would be denounced for a bigot, although it might interest him to know that some members of the clergy nowadays are recalling the course of events in France and Spain, and doubting that it is wise, after all, for religious institutions to grow too rich and withdraw too much wealth and property from the tax rolls, thus throwing the burden on the ordinary people of the community.

One year, early in the panic, Paul Gallico, single-handed, persuaded Herbert Hoover to knock together the heads of the commanding officers at Annapolis and West Point, and make them rally to a football game for charity. Grover Whalen appeared for the money, and the game raised $500,000 for the Salvation Army, a fund which, in the box office of a private producer would have received the hearty attention of the Internal Revenue Department.

As a sport writer at the time, I read and looked for a detailed publication of the charitable application of this half-million, but never saw one, and I have often had an honest curiosity, and the thought that the least the public deserved was a certified statement showing how much good the money did.

Such, nevertheless, are incomes from various sources derived, and to unknown purposes applied, unless you take for granted much more than the Treasury is willing to concede in the affairs of ordinary men.

Wearing Overalls Is Jolly Fun for A Girl Unless She Has No Choice

By ROBERT QUILLLEN.

When Napoleon had shot his last bolt at Waterloo and another Louis ruled France, a newly appointed governor embarked in a frigate with 400 other people to take over the colony of Senegal, which the allies had returned.

For reasons that do not matter here, the frigate went aground in fair weather 60 miles off the coast of Africa; the governor and other fortunates got off in boats; and 147 people were driven aboard a make-shift raft framed by the ship's masts and spars.

The sea was rough for such a rattletrap craft, and 20 people went into the sea the first day. The second night, soldiers mutilated and broke open wine casks and 60 more people were drowned or slain before morning.

The suffering and ultimate rescue of 15 skeleton survivors is a story of horror seldom duplicated in the history of seafaring, but only one dreadful detail concerns us here.

It was the third day when men, driven mad by hunger, began to gnaw their leather belts and then turned into cannibals. The third day.

In the history of exploration and disaster there are many stories of despairing people who lost their reason or died of hunger in two weeks, one week or even less. These were not desert victims, who died of thirst, but people who starved to death.

Yet it has been demonstrated many times that people can fast 30 days without injury.

Newspapers recently told the story of a pious hill-billy, afflicted with some stomach trouble, who got a "divine call" to quit eating and took no nourishment except water for 51 days. During the first weeks of his fast he worked in his garden.

Some years ago a New York physician, watched by his doubting colleagues, lived in a hotel room and denied himself all food for more than 30 days, at last breaking his fast by eating watermelon.

Upton Sinclair made a fast of 30-day fasts some years ago, and declared that he felt better and more alive after a few weeks without food.

The difference, of course, is in the mental attitude. One fasts cheerfully in the midst of plenty and feels no hunger after the second day; another becomes desperate where there is no food and dies of "starvation" within a week.

Most of the good and evil in life is a result of our mental attitude. Long exertion under a blazing sun or wintry skies may be hateful labor or thrilling sport, for thinking makes it one or the other.

Except physical hurt, every unpleasant experience or situation in life would be pleasant if accepted gladly. Fishing is fun for the President, but bitter toil for the man who does it to earn his bread.

WORLD'S WINDOW

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Spanish War's Final Phase.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind.—General Mola is hammering away at the defense of the Basque capital. He is operating with a frenzy that borders on desperation and seems to have under his command the entire aerial equipment of the insurgency. For on the other fronts, such as Cordoba, Teruel and Madrid, especially in the Guadalupe sector, the Rebels seem to have lost the initiative completely. Except in the Basque country, in fact, the so-called Loyalists have everywhere assumed the offensive.

Franco and his Insurgent junta, now that Germany and Italy no longer send reinforcements, are in a hazardous position. Only if Mola can smash his way into Bilbao and thereafter release his army for service on another front, can the Rebels expect to make any considerable effort to win the war. But Mola has to hurry. It is clear today that Germany and Italy are so thoroughly disappointed with the insurgency's military failures that they are about to withdraw whatever troops they still have supporting the Rebels.

Italy Unopposed to Britain's Proposals.

Less than a month ago Mussolini was still swearing by high and low that he would not abandon Franco and that Italy could not permit the installation of a Red regime in Madrid. In the meantime the personnel of the Valencia government has changed and is actually a shade or so more red than the last cabinet. Yet Italy is

State Editors Back Amendments

Consensus Reveals Press of State Is Solidly Behind Program as Essential to Future Welfare and Growth; Co-operation With U. S. Urged.

SOCIAL LEGISLATION IS TERMED "WORTHY"

(From the Jefferson Herald.)

The two amendments first on the ticket are old-age pensions and aid for the dependent children and blind persons. These appeal to the hearts of mankind. They are worthy. The writer has earnestly advocated them in the past and is no less for them today.

Not only should the destitute old be cared for by the federal, state and county governments, but those having possessions which are insufficient to provide the necessary comforts of life should also be included. Maybe it would be too costly to pension all people who have attained the age of sixty, but the principle is correct.

A liberal interpretation should be placed on this law, so that every old person would have the necessities of life, medical treatment, and personal attention by some one to watch and nurse them when necessary. Nothing is more humanitarian than to provide for the worthy sons and daughters of men when they have become old and can no longer care for themselves.

"MUCH TO RECOMMEND ALL OF AMENDMENTS"

(From the Newnan Herald.)

Taken as a whole, there is nothing dangerous to the public welfare in any amendment on the ballot. There is much to recommend them from the standpoint of consistent and well planned government. There may be a certain amount of give and take in them, but what may be lost by the provisions of one will undoubtedly be gained from another.

The general sentiment toward the amendments by enlightened opinion may be well illustrated by the attitude of a specially arranged meeting in Atlanta last week. At this meeting there were present about one hundred of Atlanta's leading merchants, who were called together for the purpose of hearing an explanation of the 28 amendments. The explanation was given by a person who had made a thorough study of the matter, and who after his talk answered numerous questions propounded by the merchants. The result of a vote taken thereafter was a hundred per cent indorsement of the amendments.

Coweta county voters are urged, therefore, to go to the polls on June 8 with an open mind. Consider carefully the amendments which will affect this county and the state at large as your judgment dictates. The weight of opinion is that the intent of each and every amendment is good, and we should not vote against amendments applying to local communities other than ours, simply because they have no relation to us.

RATIFICATION IS TERMED VITAL TO FUTURE WELFARE

(From the Newnan Times.)

The election to be held on June 8 is one of the most important ever held in Georgia. As good citizens we have an opportunity at the ballot box to express our approval of certain far reaching and progressive constitutional amendments.

The ratification of these amendments by the people is vital to the future welfare and development of our state. They will enable Georgia to keep step with the recovery program of our great President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and afford lasting benefits to our people. The ratification of these amendments will make possible the enactment into law of the pledges of our great Democratic party.

The amendments providing for old-age pensions, homestead and household furniture exemptions, classification of property for purposes of taxation so that the wealthy will be compelled to pay their just share of the cost of government, and providing for the general assembly to convene itself, are all of great state-wide importance. The other proposals are purely local in their application.

SENATE AUTHORITY INVOKED BY BYRD

Wallace Called Upon To Reveal Project Data.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(P)—Senator Byrd, Democrat, Virginia, disclosed today he had used Senate authority to demand that Secretary Wallace produce official records regarding what the Virginian says is "waste" in Resettlement projects in the Shenandoah area of his state.

Byrd, in a letter, called for copies of contracts and itemized statements of cost. He demanded them by virtue of his powers as chairman of the senate reorganization committee.

He asserted Wallace's estimates that new farm units would not exceed $3,775 per family were in conflict with higher figures submitted by other officials, including Rexford G. Tugwell, former RA head.

Figures submitted by C. B. Baldwin, assistant Resettlement Administrator, he said, indicated an average unit cost of $5,703.

MAN KILLED BY TRAIN FOUND TO BE GEORGIAN

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 30.—(P)—Sheriff Frank Stoutamire said today a man killed here about two weeks ago by a train had been identified as C. H. Boring, of Monroe, Ga. Information, he said, came from a Georgia sheriff who located the mother of the man killed as he attempted to board a moving freight train at the station here.

Britain Still Uses Stamps of Edward

NEW YORK, May 30.—(UP)—The large issue of stamps bearing the likeness of King Edward VIII has not yet been exhausted and is still being used in the British mails.

A letter from London was received by the United Press offices here. It bore two stamps companionably side by side—a halfpenny with the likeness of the new monarch, George VI, and a penny picturing his brother, the Duke of Windsor.

CANAL'S PASSAGE SEEN BY FLORIDIAN

Representative Green Says Issue Is Not Dead.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(P)—Representative R. A. Green, of Florida, scoffed today at assertions by canal opponents that the cross-state waterway is a dead issue.

"I believe it's going to pass this session," Green declared. "That is, unless the administration starts pushing for an early adjournment."

He claimed for the project a growing support in the house.

HEALTH TALKS

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

NOW IS THE TIME TO DO SOMETHING.

Angina pectoris, coronary thrombosis, myocarditis, apoplexy, chronic nephritis—these appear with striking frequency as the direct cause of death in the mortality tables. Men who carry heavy cares or responsibilities in business or professional life—or rather men who take business or professional too seriously, make too great a burden of their work, have no other absorbing interests, no avocation, generally develop cardiovascular degeneration before 40 and have a "nervous breakdown" or "nervous exhaustion" or some such nonsense before 50 (nonsense, that is, in the physiological sense) and slip away before 60.

In the incipient stage of this heart-artery wearing out or premature senility, when the person ascribes his ill health to "brain-fag" or "nervous strain," he monkeys more or less with drugs such as alcohol, tobacco, aspirin, the coal-tar derivatives which so quickly numb sense of pain, fatigue, worry or frustration, and perhaps tries an assortment of nostrums, medicinal and non-medicinal, recommended by Tom, Dick and Harry. Not until the disease has reached a stage where he seeks medical advice. Didn't he pass a life insurance test four years ago? Anyway, what do these ordinary doctors around here know about it? If and when a blood vessel bursts or something he'll consent to have a well-known specialist, but right now he has no organic disease and all he needs is a good rest and a steady-ying of the market... oh, well, all right, but he has no faith in pills and potions.

Not that I believe preachers like this will be heard or heeded by the wisecracks who are now in training for the routine finish. I'm merely trying to give the casual reader, I hope the young reader, a practical knowledge of CVD and how to prevent it. It is true that by the time the average victim completes his experimentation and places himself unreservedly under the care of "one of these doctors around here" it is rather late to hope to arrest the degenerative process, certainly too late to reverse it. The doctor has all he can do to carry the victim along in reasonable comfort a few more years.

The time to do something for the various and misleading manifestations of cardio-vascular degeneration is now, my lad. I said do something. Begin today to cultivate the habit of doing something every day, some kind of physical work, play or exercise apart from the routine of your business or profession. Take a walk, practice tap dancing, roll somersaults, climb some stairs, chin yourself, paint the gate, polish the car, mow the lawn, spade the garden, play golf or ball or tennis or bowls, run a mile, do your stint of calisthenic or setting-up exercises if there is nothing better to do. Whatever it may be, a daily session of shadow boxing, bag punching, walking on your hands, swimming, equitation, hiking to and from business, make it an invariable habit, and far better omit brushing your teeth, bathing or shaving than skip the daily physical activity. Believe me, it keeps you young and in your prime.

MADISON GRANT DIES. NEW YORK, May 30.—(P)—Madison Grant, 71, president of the New York Zoological Society, died today after a brief illness.

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"The cattle are grazing, Their heads never raising— They are forty feeding like one."

"Several years ago," writes a reader, whose hotels extend from Florida to Pennsylvania and cover the south, "I found that beef raised in Tennessee brought a premium on the Chicago market, and since that time we have not used the words 'Kansas City' or 'Western' on our menus when referring to beef. Your articles on this subject are timely and commendable."

He knows, too, that in his home town, "Tennessee lamb" is a product to be scrambled for, when any is available. Now that the south has proven it can produce the very best in meats what it needs is more production of this best and more recognition of it when it is produced.

Reminder thus from the reader quoted above that Tennessee beef brings a premium price in Chicago should help us get over our economic inferiority complexes in this part of the world.

Charles W. Kelly, pastor of the Greenwood Baptist church at Tuskegee Institute, agrees with this column that it is not within either the competence or the province of the church to decide between a competitive and a co-operative economic system and that to attempt such a decision is to lose meaning and value as a church.

"As a minister," he writes, "I am convinced of the soundness of your point. The church has little to gain through insistence upon the merits of the co-operative state."

And now comes a telephone call

above that of the competitive state, even if the matter were not debatable."

Letters that come to this column about the Duke of Windsor tell a story of mixed emotions like none other. Nobody agrees and everybody feels strongly. "Thank you for recalling his contribution to the empire and helping to show him as he is," writes Miss Margaret McIntyre from Nashville.

"Like Henry Mencken, I think he is just a 'poor fish'—he is suffering from the results of his own making and the sooner his name goes to oblivion the better," writes an anonymous Birminghamian, who signs, "Not a Windsor admirer."

"You forget that the Duke of Windsor did what Mr. Mike O'Griffin, bricklayer, would have been killed for and his murderer acquitted," writes "a true American" from Jacksonville.

"As an Englishman by birth, a former member of His Majesty's Coldstream Guards, the King's Foot Guards, and one who has had the pleasure of drinking beer with the Duke of Windsor when he was the beloved Prince of Wales in the guard room alongside Buckingham Palace, I believe almost every Englishman heartily agrees with you about the Duke of Windsor, or, rather, the real Englishman's King at heart," writes S. G. Holder, of Birmingham.

And now comes a telephone call from a lady who demands that we recant our kind words for Windsor and confess him the homebreaker he is. We have promised to consider the matter, but there is no hurry. For years to come, indeed, for centuries, there will be Edwardians and anti-Edwardians. For those to whom Edward is a villain his name will grow in villainy. For those to whom he is a shining figure driven from a throne to which he brought grace and promise his name will shine brighter each year.

GRAND JURY TO GET RAZOR DEATH CASE

Suspect Spends Day With Victim's Widow.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., May 30.—(UP)—District Attorney Frederick B. Smilie announced today that results of his investigation of the fatal slaying of Dennis A. O'Neill, 36-year-old Norristown attorney, would be presented to the Montgomery county grand jury Tuesday.

Joseph J. McGinley, 68-year-old father-in-law of O'Neill, held for the grand jury on a charge of homicide, was free in $25,000 bonds. He spent the day in seclusion with his daughter, Eleanor, widow of the attorney.

O'Neill died yesterday shortly after his jugular vein had been slashed by a razor as he and McGinley battled on the stairs of the O'Neill home after a quarrel between the attorney and his wife.

NEAR-CRASHES MAR ST. LOUIS AIR RACE

Landing Gear of Two Tiny Racers Give Considerable Trouble.

LAMBERT-ST. LOUIS AIRPORT, St. Louis, May 30.—(P)—Art Chester, crack Los Angeles speed pilot, narrowly escaped a crash today when the motor of his cream-colored "Jeep" quit on the take-off for a 50-mile race at the St. Louis air show.

The tiny plane, wobbling badly, came down to a rough landing but bounced to a stop just a few feet from where Roger Don Rae, young Lansing, Mich., flier, made a sensational crash landing yesterday and received severe injuries.

Rudy Kling, of Lemont, Ill., after winning the race with a speed of 233.7 miles an hour, had difficulty lowering his retractable landing gear. He was unable to lower the left wheel completely and, after circling the airport twice, came down at high speed to an erratic, jarring landing.

Marion McKeen, of Santa Monica, Cal., who finished second, likewise had difficulty setting his red racer down. He came in fast and bounced from side to side, first on one wheel and then on another, before coming to an up-right stop.

S. J. Wittman, of Oshkosh, Wis., was third. His speed was 202.1 miles an hour. McKeen's was 229.2.

FARM'S HIRED HAND PRESENTS DILEMMA FOR SECURITY LAW

Administrative Costs Would Be Prohibitive, Washington Experts Say.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—The farm's hired man and the old cow hand apparently are to look only from afar on the green fields of labor standards and social security.

Laws made and in the making contain no provision for agricultural workers. In fact, they are specifically exempted—as they were exempted under the invalid National Industrial Relations Act.

Economists and sociologists at the agriculture department said today there were basic reasons for these exclusions.

2,000,000 Workers.

There are about 2,000,000 hired workers on the 6,000,000 odd farms in the United States, with probably an equal number of family workers, relatives of the farmer who may or may not pay.

An attempt to establish wage or hour standards for an average of one worker to every three farms, the economists said, would result in administrative costs that would be larger than possible benefit.

They said the traditional long hours of farm work—from day-break until after dark—and the rush periods of plowing, planting and harvesting presented a complicated pattern of conditions that could not be fitted to standards.

Excluded From Protection.

Josiah C. Folsom, agricultural economist, said farm workers were excluded from protection under most states' workmen's compensation laws, although farming was a hazardous occupation. Folsom said about 5,000 farm workers were killed and 85,000 injured annually.

The last government wage survey showed daily rate varied from 80 cents in South Carolina to $2.85 in Connecticut with wide variations for workers receiving room and board.

Government reports indicated the lot of the farm workers had improved with recovery from the depression. The farm wage index now is 12 per cent above the pre-war level with a seven-point advance in recent months.

U. S. LOSES HOPES FOR WINDFALL TAX

Officials Fear $78,000,000 Collection Must Await Court Ruling.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—Fiscal officials revealed today they have abandoned hope of collecting about $78,000,000 in so-called AAA windfall taxes this fiscal year.

They said the supreme court must validate the windfall levies before they will yield any major revenue. Because no case is pending, that court cannot rule before this fiscal period ends June 30.

The levies were enacted in 1936 at President Roosevelt's request to recoup part of the revenue loss resulting from invalidation of processing taxes under the old Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

The imposts are aimed at processors who pass on to consumers or others the AAA processing taxes.

Numerous suits have challenged the legality of the windfall taxes. Listed as an $82,000,000 revenue item in Mr. Roosevelt's January budget, the taxes thus far have provided only $4,000,000.

Oil Competitors Paid Rail Freight For John D. Due to Secret Pact

Agreement Gave Combination a Lower Rate and Collected Enough From Others to Pay Back Traffic Charges to Group.

This is the fifth chapter in a series of daily installments which are an authentic chronicle of Mr. Rockefeller's life and career. The writer, who also wrote "John D.", an earlier biography in book form, had access to records and other information which make these articles authoritative.

By JOHN K. WINKLER. Copyright 1937, by The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.

Working constantly in the minds of John D. Rockefeller and his new partner, Henry M. Flagler, was the idea of fusion and combination.

They bought several competing refineries, scrapped one or two, continued others. By 1899 they had a refining capacity of 1,500 barrels a day out of a total capacity in Cleveland of about 11,000 barrels. The bulk of their oil was going east.

All the partners lived in Cleveland except William Rockefeller. The latter was "eastern" and "European" agent and had established offices in New York after William had been remarkably successful in disposing of the sixty carload lots of oil pouring in daily over the New York Central system.

Working quietly, Rockefeller and his associates had become the largest individual refining group in the country.

Market Flooded. Intelligent men and powerful capital had built plants in the oil regions. The railroads and allied pipe lines, pushing their way to the mouths of the wells, had solved the transportation problem. Refining capacity began to run ahead of market demands. Profits were slipping away.

Rockefeller and Flagler were frantic. At this juncture they were invited to join a scheme that seemed to offer salvation. The scheme has been known to veteran oil men ever since as the South (or Southern) Improvement company. It originated with certain refiners in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. John D. was in it to the full but never discussed it.

The South Improvement men formed a favored combination and, by pure bluff and nerve, forced the railroads to negotiate exclusive contracts. The combination was to obtain rebates running to 50 per cent. Also—and this is the remarkable part—what excess independent oil men paid, over and above the rate allowed the South Improvement company, was paid by the railroads themselves into the eager pockets of the combination. This was the so-called "drawback."

Of 2,000 shares of South Improvement stock, Rockefeller and the Standard Oil group obtained nine hundred. The contracts with the railroads were signed, amid great secrecy, in January, 1872.

Famous "Drawback." Under the South Improvement contracts the rate on crude from the oil regions to New York was set at $2.56 a barrel. Rockefeller and his associates were to be blessed with a rebate of $1.06 on this amount and also were to be paid an additional $1.06—the seductive "drawback"—on each barrel of crude shipped by independents.

Similarly Standard Oil was to pay 40 cents—exactly half the charge to men outside the South Improvement combination—to get a barrel of crude from Oil Creek to Cleveland.

It was a pleasing prospect to frugal men such as John Rockefeller and Henry Flagler. But it didn't work.

GROUPS TO DISCUSS PURCHASES BY CITY

Council Committees To Pass On Expenditures Facing Council.

Purchases involving expenditure of $54,500 will be taken up among important business to be considered by various council committees this week, prior to council's regular session set for June 7.

Bids on 12 heavy duty trucks for the sanitary department, 10 police cars, a light truck for the fire department, 40,000 gallons of gasoline and copper fittings for the waterworks will be opened by the purchasing committee at 2 o'clock this afternoon. This equipment is expected to cost approximately $40,000.

Meeting tomorrow or Wednesday, the finance committee is scheduled to take action on a recommendation for spending $14,500 set up for purchase of fire fighting equipment. In this committee the battle as to whether a pumper or a ladder truck will be bought, and from what company, will be fought out before the final decision is made by council.

The finance group, headed by Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, is to discuss the North avenue-Marietta street underpass project, which Mayor Hartsfield has said was too expensive for the city. Rights of way would cost from $200,000 to $300,000. The federal government has allocated $487,000 for construction work of the underpass and this will be lost to Atlanta if the finance committee cannot find funds necessary to buy rights of way.

Proposal of Fulton county to assume a share in operating the metropolitan sewer system will be the principal business before the sewer committee at 8 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The county offers to pay one-third the cost of all sewer disposal plants until the Clayton plant is completed and then to operate it entirely as well as maintain the Peachtree creek sewers outside the city limits.

Recommendations of the various committees will be taken up by council at its regular session.

GAS STATION HELD UP BY 3 NEGROES IN CAR

Holdup of a filling station at 211 Peters street shortly before 4 o'clock yesterday morning was reported to police.

Jack Coggins, operator of the gas station said three negro men drove in the plane and bought gas, presenting a $20 bill in payment. When Coggins returned with the change, he said, one of the negroes pulled a gun and told him he would take "all the money." Between $30 and $40 was lost in the holdup, Coggins told police.

Chan Film, Stage Show Open Week at Capitol

The inimitable Charlie Chan moves through another entertaining and exciting picture, "Charlie Chan at the Olympics," which yesterday began a week's engagement at the Capitol theater.

Augmenting the feature film, one of the best in the Chan series, is a lively and fast-moving stage show, "Winter Garden Revue," which presents a large cast of clever entertainers.

Supporting Walter Oland, who, of course, plays Chan, are Keye Luke, Katherine deMille, Pauline Moore and Layne Tom Jr., a nine-year-old Chinese boy who is a distinct advantage to the picture.

As for the plot, it deals mainly with Chan's breaking up a death-dealing ring of international spies who strike terror into the Olympic sports arena, in efforts to seize a secret radio-controlled device.

There are thrills aplenty, with murder, combat, and a mad dog jammed with thousands of spectators. You'll like "Charlie Chan at the Olympics."

The stage show music is furnished by Frank Ayraud's orchestra, augmented by Enrico Leide and his Capitolians. Short subjects complete the bill.—B. J.

As for the plot, it deals mainly with Chan's breaking up a death-dealing ring of international spies who strike terror into the Olympic sports arena, in efforts to seize a secret radio-controlled device.

There are thrills aplenty, with murder, combat, and a mad dog jammed with thousands of spectators. You'll like "Charlie Chan at the Olympics."

The stage show music is furnished by Frank Ayraud's orchestra, augmented by Enrico Leide and his Capitolians. Short subjects complete the bill.—B. J.

EDUCATION STUDIED TO REDUCE RELIEF AND JOBLESSNESS

F. D. R. Committee Turns to Vocational Training as Weapon.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's advisory committee on education has undertaken a study of vocational training as a major weapon against the dual problem of relief and unemployment.

Dr. John T. David, secretary to the committee, headed by Dr. Floyd Reeves, of the University of Chicago, said today the committee is going into that field as one of the important educational developments created by the depression.

Mr. Roosevelt asked the committee last week to give "more extended" study to the whole subject of federal relationship to local education and report before the next congress session.

The possibility of cutting down unemployment costs by reducing the proportion of unskilled workers in America's labor market, David said in discussing the study, "is one aspect you can't get away from."

The house recently approved a $14,483,000 appropriation—more than six times the budget director's recommendation—for vocational training.

Report by January. David said the committee will make no report until next December or January.

The George-Elzey act, which authorized a yearly appropriation of $3,084,603 for vocational education expires June 30.

The George-Deen act is designed to take its place, authorizing as much as $14,483,000 a year. The senate appropriations committee now has the question before it.

Of the total, $4,000,000 would go to vocational education in agriculture; $4,000,000 to home economics; $4,000,000 to trades and industry; $1,200,000 to distributive occupational subjects; $1,000,000 to teacher training, and the balance to stand as additional amounts for minimum allotments.

"These driving tests, in my opinion, have materially aided the women of Atlanta and vicinity in learning the fine points about driving automobiles, have taught them the Atlanta traffic regulations, and have provided them with 12 days of fun and excitement," Lieutenant W. M. (Buck) Weaver, of the Atlanta police traffic detail, said following the completion of the final tests yesterday afternoon.

The women's driving contest was sponsored this year for the first time in Atlanta by The Constitution in co-operation with Sears Service station, the Ford dealers in Atlanta, Decatur, Roswell and East Point, and various other local merchants.

To Improve Driving. Fundamentally, the purpose of the contest was to provide expert driving instruction for the women of Atlanta and in this manner aid them in learning the fine points about driving an automobile.

Spick and Span County Dairy Model for Fulton Farms

Aristocrats of Fulton county's milk cows are these members of herd of thoroughbreds owned by the recently established county dairy farm, near the river camp. Twenty-two cows, eight of which are now being milked, and a pure-bred Guernsey bull are now owned by the county. The cattle were purchased under the sponsorship of Commissioner Charles R. Adams and the establishment of a model dairy farm is his project. The dairy is under the direct supervision of County Agent S. D. Truitt.

And now, the city maid tries her hand at milk-maiding. Mrs. Lois Bowers, of Atlanta, heard glowing tales of the modernly equipped county dairy farm and went out to see it for herself. Enthused at the cleanliness and the fine-looking cows, she decided to try her hand at milking one of the thoroughbreds. Donning milker's coat and apron, she gave it a try. Above she is shown in her first attempt at milking a cow.

Daughter of Editor Jack Williams Outstanding Graduate of G.S.C.W.

Miss Ruth Williams, Who Was Voted Most Versatile Freshman, To Get Degree After Three Years. Plans Career as Newspaperwoman.

VALDOSTA, Ga., May 30.—(AP)—Miss Ruth Williams, of Waycross, who three years ago was voted the most versatile freshman at the Georgia State College for Women, will be graduated from the same institution June 11 after having established an outstanding student record.

The daughter of Senator and Mrs. Jack Williams, of Waycross, Miss Williams not only completed her college course in three years and a summer session, but succeeded in making the dean's list every quarter. This year she was selected by her classmates as one of the eight most outstanding seniors to be featured in the Pine Cone, the college annual.

When asked what she intended to do after graduation, she said, "My application is in at Wellesley for next year. Dad wants me to take a year of graduate study there and major in physical education."

When Mrs. King was announced as the winner it was recalled that Policeman Mercer White remarked after giving her a preliminary test, "That's the woman someone will have to beat to win the grand prize."

Mrs. Sutton and Miss Brockman were also high in their praise of the contest. They wished all women had entered.

Asked why she said the sponsors should be congratulated for staging the contest, Mrs. Sutton jokingly retorted, "Because they gave me $50, of course."

Preliminary tests, semi-finals and finals were given under the direction of the following expert police drivers: Lieutenant Weaver, Atlanta Traffic Policemen E. B. Brooks, C. A. Cook, T. E. Edwards, Hoyt Gaines, Mercer White, E. A. Dorsey, W. L. Jay, County Police Officer Hubert Reed and H. H. Green and S. S. Hembree, chief of the Roswell police force.

All trophies used in the finals and semi-finals were furnished by Bick's Bowling alley.

Co-operating in sponsoring the contest were Sears Service station; Ernest G. Beaudry, A. M. Chandler, Inc., East Point Company, Frost-Cotton Motors, Inc., John E. McCrea, Inc., Roswell Motor Company, Wade Motor Company, Harris Automotive Service, Black & White Cab Company; Dargan, Whitington & Connor and Wall's Cleaners.

Graves is chairman of a nine-state southeastern governors' conference, which is supporting the petition before the I. C. C.

Besides the "parity" plea Graves presented a petition asking suspension and a revision of increased rail tariffs effective June 8 on cotton mill products.

Had Pilot License.

Luquire, said L. G. Mason, municipal airport manager, held a private pilot's license issued him at Birmingham. Until recently he owned his own plane there, Mason said.

Sarah Williams, sister of the 19-year-old girl who died in the accident, was saved the same fate, she said, "when we both wanted to go, but Russell suggested one of us had better wait. I did."

"We asked him to let us go with him. He took the plane up and came back. We both started to get in. Then he told one of us to wait. They were gone such an awful long time, I got nervous. Then the telephone rang, somebody shouted:

"Crash at High and Jackson." "A sickening feeling went all over me. I knew it was them.

The dead girl was a department store saleswoman. Russell Luquire was president of the Luquire Insurance Company, of Birmingham, which operated over a wide area of Alabama. He became head of the company in 1934 and was one of its founders.

Exactly a week ago today the Luquire company opened an elaborate funeral home here. From a few hundred feet up, it was visible from the spot where the plane crashed.

Fowler is in St. Louis to discuss his idea with proponents of the proposal to convert the St. Louis downtown riverfront into a memorial to Thomas Jefferson and the Louisiana Purchase. He has made a preliminary design for the tower, which would be 2,500 feet high.

rials, and that Jackson failed to get one item. Fluker said he then told him to keep the money which would have paid for the item, to consider the sum as pay for labor.

The negro still insisted, however, that Jackson owed him 75 cents, Fluker reiterated.

Mrs. W. S. Compton, who lives around the corner from the Fluker home, on Shenandoah avenue, testified she saw Jackson leave the Fluker home in the Fluker car a short time after she had heard screams coming from the house.

Other testimony was given by firemen who fought the blaze at the Fluker home, and by Lieutenant M. B. Petty and Patrolman U. G. Oakes, who arrested Jackson at Mitchell and Davis streets when the negro crashed the Fluker car into a telephone pole.

Jackson is under heavy guard at Fulton tower.

Funeral services for Mrs. Fluker will be held at 10 o'clock this morning at St. Patrick's church, Augusta, with the Rev. Father Leo M. Keenan officiating. Burial will be in Augusta cemetery.

NEW HUNT HINTED FOR LOST PLANE

Air Express Is Believed To Have Crashed East of Salt Lake in December.

SALT LAKE CITY, May 30.—(AP)—Reports of a strong new clue to the possible whereabouts of an airplane and its seven occupants, missing five months, stirred the search anew tonight.

The reports were denied by officials of Western Air Express, owner of the transport that disappeared last December 15.

The Associated Press was told on good authority that one or more yellowed letters, their addresses obliterated but with postmarks reported definitely those of mail carried by the Los Angeles-to-Salt Lake craft, were found by a farmer.

One who could not be quoted said the region of the find would be searched intensively, in secret. He said it was hoped the wreckage might be found near where the farmer, name not given, picked up the soiled letters.

A Salt Lake airport attaché who declined use of his name told the Associated Press that the farmer, seeking $1,000 reward, presented the mail as proof he had found the plane in the Wasatch mountains east of Utah's capital.

BOY BITTEN BY SNAKE

DURING SWIM IN RIVER

Heyward Turner, 18, of 161 Seventeenth street, N. E., a student at Georgia Tech, was bitten on the foot by what Grady physicians described as a venomous snake while he was swimming with companions yesterday afternoon in the Chattahoochee river near the Howell Mill road bridge.

Taken to Buckhead by several companions, he was rushed to the hospital by county police. Although ill from the effects of the poison, his condition last night was described as "good."

"Lovers' Church" Pastor Attacks Marriage Ban

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 30.—(AP)—Enforced spinsterhood was described today as the "burglar peeking out from under the bed of tens of thousands of women teachers in the country."

"Love is the great law in teaching," asserted Dr. W. A. McKeever, psychologist and founder of the church, as he decried a ban which he said existed in many cities against the marriage of teachers.

About 200 persons attended today's session, most of them women of middle age.

"There is no great teacher but that he or she is in love with somebody," he told his audience. "The denial of love means anguish, bitterness and a frequent threat of a nervous collapse."

He ranked teachers first as life mates. Second were home economic graduates of agricultural colleges; secretaries and stenographers third, and the graduates of state universities "well down the line."

"Think of it," he declared, "what a tragedy it is for these beautiful motherly women to be confronted practically with this statement: 'You are worthy to teach our children, but you must not forego the God-given right to children of your own, upon which you may lavish your normal love and caretaking.'"

GAS STATION OPERATOR SLUGGED BY AUTOIST

PALMETTO, Ga., May 30.—F. L. Walker, operator of a filling station on the Atlanta-West Point highway, two miles from here, was slugged three times on the head by a man early last night, apparently in a holdup attempt.

Walker, Whitmore, seated on the porch of his home several hundred yards from the station, witnessed the incident. The assailant fled in an automobile when Whitmore ran to Walker's aid. The car was later found several miles away.

Walker did not require hospital treatment.

THE STORY THUS FAR:

After two years in London Carol Clayton returns to the Brookdale horse-breeding farm in Saratoga that has been the home of the Claytons for three generations. With her, as her fiancé, young and wealthy Hartley Madison. On her first day back, her father, Jim Clayton, dies. Duke Bradley, a bookmaker, and Jim's friend, holds a mortgage on Brookdale in lieu of her father's $75,000 debt to him. Carol, resenting Duke since their first meeting, asks him to wait until she is married so she can pay him, here. That very evening she marries for money and decides to postpone her wedding until she can pay him, here. That very evening she marries for money and decides to postpone her wedding until she can pay him, here. That very evening she marries for money and decides to postpone her wedding until she can pay him, here.

INSTALLMENT IX.

"Clear with light winds is the forecast," she muttered, "that means a dry track and at Narragansett, Night Flight ran three furlongs in one, thirteen and three-fifths on a muddy track. That makes him good for—" she stopped abruptly and shouted to Rosetta, "Can't they stop that noise, ever, the hoodlums? How can I do this out with that infernal noise going on?"

"Bound to be a racket, honey, when that Miss O'Malley and Mr. Duke are together. Minnie she lays her eye on him, before he speaks even, she begins laughing and soon as he speaks, she hollers."

"I can't stand it," Carol said. "Give up your handicapping for a while, honey," said Rosetta. "You look plumb worn out. I'll dream you a horse tonight—I have a hunch I'll dream a hot shot for you."

"Ask Mr. Bradley to come in a minute, please," she said.

Rosetta rose from the corner, laid down her knitting and went to the door. Before she went out she said, "You got a pencil smudge on your cheek, honey child."

"What about it? I'm busy."

"Just thought you mightn't want Mr. Duke to see you not looking your prettiest."

"Don't be ridiculous. And do as I told you."

She bent over her papers. Then hurriedly, almost guiltily she reached for her vanity case, rubbed the mark off, powdered her nose and patted her hair.

"Mr. Bradley," she said stiffly, when Duke came in. "It is getting late and I have work to do. Would you mind asking your friends to have some consideration for other passengers?"

"They are rather noisy, but it's the first time this season they've all been together and they think it rates a party. Don't you think—"

"I think they are just a bunch of dressed-up rowdies whose ideas of home is a shoddy hotel room, whose idea of a place to go is a race track—their futures mapped out for them by bang-tails."

"Carol," said Duke quietly, "you don't like or trust me, but I'm forgetting that now and I'm dropping my kidding. Your nerves can't stand too much and I'm not just talking about that commotion going on out there, either."

"You're prescribing a bromide and a good night's rest, I suppose."

"On the contrary, I was going to suggest that you put away your pencil and your papers and come outside with the gang for a while. You won't? Well, it was a good suggestion, but it would have been only temporary relief anyway. So here's another and a serious one. Wire Hartley to meet us. He'll come if you ask him. That will settle everything for all of us."

"Still scheming to get at the Madison millions are you? Well, I'm telling you again, you're not going to do it."

"Partly that—sure. Why deny it? I'm a bookie and it would be a leg up for me if I place Hartley's bets. What's wrong with that? You bet, don't you? Why be selfish about it and keep Hartley and me apart?"

"How many times do we have to rehash this same old dish of hash? If you don't know by now that I mean what I say, you're just too dumb to bother with any more. So once again, will you please tell those people out there—especially that Fritz O'Malley of yours—to try to show a little of the good breeding they haven't got and never will have?"

"You're going to crack," he said quietly, "and it won't be long either. I know the signs. You're overdoing this thing, just as you do everything else, I imagine."

"I will not crack and will not stop until I have paid you the last cent of that seventy-six grand and there's a long way to go yet."

"But my plan is so simple and easy and quick—wire Hartley, let him bet—"

"You've taken some trimming for me. How do you know if he bet you wouldn't find yourself cleaned out, looking around for a tin cup to hold out on a street corner? Remember, he wouldn't be using chicken-feed like me."

"I might mention the law of averages, but I believe I've done that before. But my point is—I've offered to cancel your marker when he places the first bet. If he finishes me—well, that's my affair. And you—why you could be married right away."

"Thank you so much for your kind interest," she said. "And now, will you please be good enough to call Rosetta. I bid you goodnight."

"But why wear yourself out with this fool handicapping? You're doing it just so you can be married and—"

"Will you be good enough to call Rosetta?" she said.

He gave her a look, pursed his lips, shook his head and went to the door.

Duke saw Rosetta. She did not see him, nor did she hear him when he called. Duke smiled and turned back to Carol.

"I hate to interfere. Rosetta is having herself a little romance."

Carol rose and went to the door. Rosetta and the porter were dancing in the narrow corridor.

"Rosetta," called Carol. "What does this mean?"

"Nothing, honey, nothing at all," said Rosetta, freeing herself from her partner, "cept seemed a shame to let such music go to waste. Was you wanting something?"

"Porter," said Carol, "I'm moving. Get me another compartment—I don't care how. Just get it. Rosetta, put your things in the bags and don't jumble up my papers."

The porter, mumbering there was a compartment two cars ahead, rushed on to get it ready. Rosetta went to the bags and Carol put on her coat and hat. She sent a searching glance around the compartment.

"All right," she said. "We've got everything."

"Don't want to leave that, do you?" asked Duke nodding toward something on the table. It was her engagement ring.

"Thank you," she said and her face flushed as she took the ring and slipped it on her finger. Something strange in her voice and manner touched Duke.

"Why don't you send for Madison?" he said in a low tone, as he held the door open for her.

"Goodnight," she said.

Carol made no answer. She was bracing herself to go through that chattering, singing, laughing crowd. There were men and women there whom she had known since she was a little girl. She couldn't hope to pass through them without stopping for greetings and questions and talk of the old days. She didn't feel equal to it. If only she hadn't sent for Duke! He always got on her nerves!

She spoke to a number of old acquaintances but she was polite only, not cordial. She was as one from another world. But not when "Hand-Riding" Kelly greeted her. There was something so human, so winning about the pint-sized jockey that no one could do anything less than be as friendly to him as he was to the whole world.

"Oh, I am glad to see you, Kelly," she said, shaking his hand. "And I, you, Miss Clayton. And my are you beautiful! Always were the best-looking ever at the tracks, but being a real grown-up young lady has bettered her. She's only, not cordial. She was as one from another world. But not when "Hand-Riding" Kelly greeted her. There was something so human, so winning about the pint-sized jockey that no one could do anything less than be as friendly to him as he was to the whole world."

"I wanted to write to you about—"

"You fathered it! I'm not much at writing, nor talking either—but, fell, I'll never forget him! none of this gang ever will. He was the sweetest guy a jockey ever rode for."

Carol could not answer. She was blinking back the tears. She did not know that Duke was looking at her as if he were seeing her for the first time.

"You broke away," said Hand-Riding Kelly, seeing the tears she could not quite keep back, "for a while any way. Well next season is my last. You needn't laugh—I know we all say it and we all know it. But I mean it. Remember Pearl? Well, here she is coming with our gang of kids to speak to you. That's the answer. We can't drag dozens of youngsters, more or less, around forever. So after next season—"

She spoke to Pearl and the children and to a number of old friends of her mother's. But that soft look was going from her face and it vanished completely when she saw Fritz O'Malley, sitting by Duke, her arm linked through his. They were singing their beloved song, "Saratoga." Fritz smiled at her and stopped singing to ask her to join them. Carol thanked her, but said she was too busy.

"Shameless hussy," she thought, "engaged to one man and acting like that."

The porter had set up the table in their compartment and Carol sat down at once to her papers. She muttered as she drove her pencil over the sheets.

"Seven times thirty-six and a half—makes fifty-four which—gives me—"

She stopped, took off her engagement ring, laid it on the table and began again.

"Where was I?" she asked, running her hands through her hair. Rosetta leaned toward her.

"Honey child," she said, "I don't want to pest you, but if you don't stop putting all those figures in your head, they'll just bust it wide open."

"Keep still, I'm all right."

"You are not. Ain't cared for you since you was a tiny baby—don't I know all about you? C'pt for those two years in England I've always looked after you and I intend to do it now. I'm going to send for Mr. Madison, I am. Maybe he'll make you stop these foolish girly ways."

"How would you like to mind your own business, Rosetta?"

"Whatever else am I doing? My my job to take care of you, as I see it."

Continued Tomorrow.

THE GALAPAGOS ISLANDS.

I—Strange Tortoises.

Four hundred and two years ago, a Spanish sailing vessel met with calm weather while on the Pacific ocean, not far from the South American coast. There was no wind to fill the sails, but the boat was moved westward by a strong ocean current.

All told, there are several hundred islands, but most of them are hardly more than large rocks which jut above the water's surface. Twelve of the islands, however, are of fairly good size. The area of the entire group is more than 2,900 square miles.

For a long time after their discovery, the islands were not used for lasting settlement. They were visited by pirates, now and then, and sometimes ships were wrecked on their shores. Stories tell of pirate gold which was buried on the island.

A British visitor, who went to the Galapagos islands in 1768, left words about the giant turtles: "The creatures are the ugliest in nature. The shell is like the top of an old hackney coach, as black as jet. The legs and neck are very long. They have club feet. Two of our men pounted the back of one of them. If carried them, and never regarded the weight."

In later stories this week, we shall have more about these strange turtles, also facts about other animals hardly less strange.

FRIENDLY COUNSEL

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

I am a bachelor. How can I find her? Here's what I want: A girl who is religious and morally sound, a good housekeeper, a good comrade, a partner who is pleasant and cheerful and not inclined to nag. She must be affectionate, healthy, good looking and personally neat. I don't care so much for her having had a college education if she is mentally alert and sensible enough to handle money. It would be nice if she were musical and could sing or play an instrument. I would like her to have had some social experience which is necessary to give a woman poise. I realize that to get all this in one girl will be a hard task. But this is the sort of woman I want to bear my children and I will accept no substitute.

R. L.

ANSWER:

You have taken the good advice of a wise man and hitched your wagon to a star, for which you should have full credit provided you have a fine wagon well loaded with all the things that women admire, desire and expect to find in the model husband. Some of which are good morals, good manners, good appearance, good income, willingness to go fifty-fifty with the wife in everything. With such fine ideals concerning women love and marriage no doubt you are a man of character, ambition and ability who can hold your own in the world of business or profession, a man whom other men respect and look up to as a man among men. Then you can set your model wife up in a comfortable home, be generous with her and expect her to run the home as you run the business, without interference or suggestion, except when it is invited.

You are no doubt well groomed, well-turned out, careful of the niceties of life such as good table manners, courteous treatment of your housemates, your business and social acquaintances. In consequence you will be able to move gracefully in the circle in which your model wife moves, accept her friends and participate in her social life. Perhaps you have some accomplishment or some parlor tricks that will contribute to her pride and pleasure as her mistressship will contribute to yours.

When things go wrong at the office and you get in a black mood you are not the sort to bring it home and bathe yourself and the wife in the gloom. You are the sort to lock the office door on worries and breeze in with a kiss for her, a complimentary note to her, and a good suggestion for a pleasant evening's diversion and entertainment.

You won't neglect her, make her unhappy about another woman, drink too much or give her anything to nag you about. You will never criticize her for being extravagant or intimate that she isn't giving you your money's worth. When the steak is too done and the ice cream too soft you will pat her on the back and tell her that everybody slips sometimes. You will keep her on her toes by praising her, not by prompting her and complaining of her.

When the babies come you will see that your wife has the best medical care. You will get up in the night to quiet them, give her a lift with the nursing, assume half the responsibility for disciplining them, take them to Sunday School and set them such a good example that they will love you, admire you and follow in your footsteps.

Being a bachelor with good morals, good manners, good appearance and good income, let me tell you that already there are dozens of girls who have their eyes on you and their hearts set on marrying you. You can stand perfectly still, look them over and take your pick. Some of them will surely have all the qualifications you specify. And won't the chosen one be lucky!

ITALIAN FURNITURE.

When we went on a European trip. I went on a European trip and shipped back from Italy some very beautiful Renaissance furniture, including a desk, bookcase and two Dante's chairs—all hand-carved in a very dark wood (almost black) which I placed in my living room. I made two dark red velvet cushions for the two chairs," wrote one of our readers. "My three-piece living room set of taupe mohair does not go well with this other furniture, and I would like to either reupholster my three pieces with some sort of damask or get something new. The background of my rug is a dark red scattered with dark blue, green and yellow (a Persian hunting scene). Would you advise me to get a new living room set, and if so, what period or style and what color should I get to go with my Italian pieces? Or if I would reupholster the one I have now what colors should I

Frocks Wally Will Wear When She Becomes Duchess of Windsor

Flowered crepe and midnight blue featured in afternoon and semi-formal costumes of tressseau for Edward's bride-to-be.

Among the staggering number of dresses included in her honeymoon ensemble, Mrs. Wallis Warfield, the woman on whom perhaps more eyes are focused than any other in the news of today, has selected the frock and jacket suit by Mainbocker shown on the left above. The ground of this high-necked frock and long-tailed jacket in flowered crepe is violet blue, the pattern multi-colored.

The long-sleeved jacket covers a very low back décolleté and a rustling, ruffled petticoat in bright blue taffeta stiffens the rippled hem of the dress skirt.

A semi-formal frock of midnight blue soft crepe Romain, shown at the right, will also be worn while the Duke and Duchess of Windsor are honeymooning following their marriage on June 3. The frock is cut high at the neck, where a touch of knotted silk provides a smart finish. The surah girdle ties in a lovers' knot and a bolero of blue dotted surah completes this ensemble, also by Mainbocker.

Nor did this great designer slight the daytime and sports angle in the world's most famous tressseau of the day. The small inset at extreme left shows a white, two-piece suit with four cross pockets. The beach suit of white toile at center top is worn over shorts of the same material, while the handkerchief and scarf are of blue silk, polka-dotted.

Delightful and cool looking is the summer dress of white shantung with rounded applique of the same material, sketched at lower right.

Created by the famous French designer for the future Duchess, the influence of these costumes will no doubt be felt in far-scattered sections of the world, as women decide upon vacation wardrobes this summer.

have the three pieces and what material? I have beige Venetian blinds and I use no curtains. What color and what kind of material should I get for draperies. Should I get a floral pattern or stripes. "My dining room is small—8x11 and very near my living room. I saw a very pretty India druggist rug. Do you think it would be appropriate? What would you suggest?"

MY DAY

By Eleanor Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Friday.—Spanish children are weighing more and more heavily on my mind. The American Friends Service Committee has been active in feeding children in Spain, largely through the English Quakers. In the last few days I have heard so many stories that I have been carried back to the days of the World War.

I hope very much that some of these children who can, will contribute money so these children can be taken to safety, fed, clothed and educated adequately. I also hope they can be kept as near to home as possible so the distracted parents may find them again as soon as conditions warrant the recruiting of families.

I think older people suffer almost more than children under circumstances such as exist under war conditions where children have to be separated from their natural guardians. Of course, many of these children will probably have no parents to search for them in the future. Even in that case, I think it best they should grow up as near their own homes as possible and, when conditions permit, be returned to the part of the country from which they came.

In the case of children, it does not matter a great deal whether the elders are right or wrong. The children are not responsible. Just as we fed children from every nationality during the war, I hope we will feed, clothe and educate any children who need it at the present time.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brown, their two little boys and I were having a leisurely breakfast this morning when they came to tell me that Mrs. John Greenway had arrived. I had expected her this evening and it was, therefore, a delightful surprise. We never meet without having a great deal to talk about. Before I knew it, I was told my horse was waiting for me at Memorial Bridge. I was still sitting at my desk and had not even seen the housekeeper. To say that I hurried through my interviews, would hardly describe the way I hustled people in and out of the chair beside my desk. Then I spent an hour and a half riding along the Potomac river.

Mrs. William Brown Meloney, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes and Mrs. Anna Louise Strong lunched with me. They're interesting women and also very different.

An afternoon full of appointments, and tonight we give the party for the newspaper fraternity. It is warm enough to make the garden a very pleasant place but I am, as usual, wondering if we are going to have heavy storms which will keep us from enjoying the open air.

Of late, every afternoon, we have had a thunderstorm, and I am thankful my early training on the Hudson river made me impervious to any excitement, no matter how hard "Henry Hudson might roll his ninepins." When I had my daughter's dogs with me, the male dog, Jack, always provided the show of nerves. He hid himself under the bed or table or, if possible, under my chair, evidently feeling that if he saw nothing he was protected.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

A good friend has taken me roundly to task for not supporting the portion of a group of young ministers at the recent session of the Southern Baptist convention when they offered a resolution committing the convention to a policy and program of attack upon capitalism. Without desiring to debate the details of the aforesaid resolution, I would say that it is not, in my humble judgment, the primary task of religious bodies to legislate and resolve on the niceties of this and that school of thought in the economic, social and political realms. I did not, therefore, as I have never done, nor ever expect to, get all worked up over the deliverance of some well-intentioned friend on these subjects in a Baptist convention.

The Christian concept of life is not based upon forcing other people to believe what you believe, nor does the Christian concept of life provide any machinery for making the other fellow do what you tell him. It works the other way round. If I understand it, namely, "Do unto others as you would that others should do unto you."

When men get up in religious gatherings, or any other sort of gatherings, so far as I am concerned, and talk about their neighbors as being thieves and robbers, declaring warfare, at least in words, we may be very sure that they are a long way from any abiding solution of the economic, social and other ills that bring grief to so many today.

Hollywood Today

By SHEILAH GRAHAM.

HOLLYWOOD, May 30.—Claudette Colbert would rather talk of husband Joel Pressman's laboratory than of her screen work. She first met the "Doc" several years ago when suffering with sinus trouble. She is the only actress in Hollywood who can pronounce "bronchocopy"—and knows what it means. . . . Joan Crawford's cautiousness with strangers is a hangover from the time she was married to Douglas Fairbanks Jr. Neither the Senior Doug nor Mary Pickford, who was then his wife, favored Miss Crawford as a daughter-in-law, and the sensitive actress has been reticent ever since.

Writer Grover Jones has a peculiar hobby—he attends business conventions. He usually sits at the back of the hall for an hour or so before sending a note to the chairman, telling him he is a small exhibitor from Iowa and would like to address the meeting. He gives the boys the old stuff about "fighting shoulder to shoulder" and "doing my small bits," etc., and then goes home satisfied. Some fun!

Shirley Temple has the finest stamp collection in Hollywood—culled from letters written her by fans from all parts of the world. . . . May Robson tells the story of the time she acted on the stage with John Barrymore. As part of his dialogue, he had to say there was a "nasty smell in the room. Suddenly, without any warning, he pointed to Miss Robson and exclaimed, "So, it's you!" That was not in the script.

Sari Maritz, whose promising screen career ended when she married Producer Sam Katz, says, "My husband's contribution to pictures was taking me out of them." . . . Every time there is a cinema celebrity in the audience, Wrestler Man Mountain Dean either tries to fall in his lap or break someone's neck to attract attention. To date he has landed one small part—in "Reckless," with Jean Harlow.

Did you know?—That the cavalier eaten for the screen is "B-B" shot covered with oil? . . . That clams are practically impossible to photograph because of their color? . . . That Al Jolson was paid $17,000 in 1927 for one week at the New York Metropolitan theater? . . . That Captain William Emile, trainer of Douglas Fairbanks, has created more than 20 duels for screen plays? He is also an actor and has appeared in 50 pictures and never lived through one of them. The hero usually kills him. Between pictures, the captain designs dresses and owns a shop called "Emile's Modes" in Glendale, Cal.

Turning south into the short half-block below the intersection of Cahuenga avenue and Hollywood boulevard, you leave the turmoil and hurly-burly of an American city and enter the lazy peace and sun-drenched quiet of a cow-town of the old west. There, within a skip and jump from clanging street cars, shouts of newsboys, the drone of a thousand passing motor cars, is the stamp-sized district known as the Water Hole. . . . The Water Hole is loafing headquarters for all the cowboys, trick riders, steer wranglers and rodeo hands who do not happen to be working in a motion picture at the time. All day long these fellows sit along the sidewalk with their backs flat against the sunny wall of the cut-rate drug store on the corner, on packing cases and on the bread box in front of Texas Slim's lunch room, and talk over the things that cowboys talk about. . . . A film producer who needs cow hands for a western picture sends an assistant director to the Water Hole, and within two minutes he can hire 15 or 20.

A Skin Freshener To Close the Pores and A Lotion for Blackheads and Pimples

By LILLIAN MAE.

You've no doubt had your "sulphur and molasses" or some similar systemic spring tonic, but have you given your skin a similar spring purging?

We go ahead packing our pores with creams, rouge and powder, and seldom give them a thorough clearing so necessary if our skin is to breathe and function properly, and then we resent the appearance of pimples and blackheads!

In these busy lives that we lead, if we would so budget our time as to allow definite periods for the care that is so essential if we would have healthy and glowing complexions, we would be paid back many times over in appearance. We can get by for a short while with hurriedly slapping on make-up, but before long, unless we do something about promoting a healthy condition, we'll have facial blemishes no end.

After cleansing, powder and rouge should never be applied without first using a freshener lotion to close the pores, thus preventing make-up to lodge in them, clogging the pores and making it impossible for them to exude their natural amount of sebum and thus forming blackheads, pimples and a condition that is anything but pleasing in appearance.

I can tell you of a very fine, soothing freshener lotion, slightly astringent, which, applied either with an atomizer or with a pad of cotton wrung out of cold water, following the cleansing cream, will do much toward creating that happy and healthy-looking complexion.

If you have the distressing condition of pimples, blackheads and other complexion blemishes, call me for information about a special acne lotion which should be applied to the affected areas three times a week at night, with cotton pads wrung out of cold water. Unless your condition is unusually stubborn, you will soon notice a very definite change for the better. If your skin is exceedingly oily, this last-mentioned lotion, used three times a week, will moderate the overactivity of the oil glands, and thus prevent such an unattractive skin appearance.

But of course, if you do not eat and exercise properly, exterior treatments alone won't make your skin lovely. Be sure, during these summer months, to include plenty of fresh fruits and green vegetables in your daily diet. And don't forget to drink many, many glasses of water each day.

If you are interested in the soothing freshener and the lotion I've recommended for pimples, blackheads and acne, call me at my office in The Constitution building. If you live outside Atlanta, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Your Figure, Madam

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

MEN OFTEN WRONG ABOUT EXERCISE.

You men are not as well-informed on the subject of weight and waistlines as women. Nevertheless, most of you are seriously concerned about your beltline as a health barometer. In fact, only the alarmingly close connection between the beltline and longevity could persuade you to exercise.

Once you are converted to exercise, you are apt to go at it—right or wrong—for all you are worth. But there is more to exercise than working up a perspiration, and unless you choose the right kind of exercises and do them correctly, you will not get the results you expect.

Most of you masculine reducers are bent on decreasing abdominal girth. To do this you either bend over and touch the floor 50 times every morning, or concentrate on leg-raising exercises. The usual bending exercises do nothing for an aldermanic front, and too many leg-raising exercises overdevelop the thick front muscles, without in the least affecting the antagonistic muscles. Both groups must be strengthened if they are to hold you in shape.

Pull abdominal muscles up and in, then slide down.

In the leg-raising movements, much of the exercise is performed also by the muscles of the lower back, and is wasted as far as reducing the abdomen is concerned. The best exercise for restoring tone to the abdominal muscles is that which forcibly retracts the abdominal wall. The following exercises are especially effective:

Position: Lying on the floor, feet resting on a heavy piece of furniture about two feet from the floor, knees straight.

Movement: Raise the hips off the floor until the body is in a straight line from feet to chest. Slowly lower hips to floor. As the hips are raised inhale deeply and on the lowering movement exhale. Perform the exercise six times at first, later 12. After you have reconditioned your muscles, the exercise may be performed 60 times, relaxing and resting after the first 30 times. This exercise is a favorite with Donald Loomis, the physical trainer who keeps down the waistlines of masculine movie stars and directors.

Position: Standing, feet about 12 to 18 inches from the wall and back resting against wall.

Movement: Pull up and in with lower abdominal muscles until the small of the back presses against the wall. Now, holding this position, slide down the wall until you are squatting. Resume original position and repeat six times, later 12.

These important abdominal muscles are reflexly contracted in all movements of creeping, hanging and reclining. Any exercise performed on the knees and elbows, arching the back, is good abdominal exercise. Hanging from a stretching bar strengthens these muscles. You will also get excellent results from the exercises of complete extension given in the leaflet, "Stretch the Fat From Your Waistline, Ribs and Wristbone." Additional useful exercises are given in the leaflet, "Waistlines and Beltlines."

Don't overlook the value of regularity in exercise. Ten to 15 minutes a day of exercise of the right sort will keep you in shape far better than several hours of strenuous week-end activity.

Knoxville Takes Double-Header From Atlanta, 10-9, 8-3

At 10 o'clock this morning the field in the big Iron Derby will come whirling around the big brick oval at Indianapolis in the annual 500-mile automobile race.

Five hundred miles of body-wearing toil behind the wheel at an average speed of more than 100 miles an hour is the lot of the driver who would finish in the money.

It is this nation's most popular sports event, the only one comparable with the great crowds which see the major events in England's program of sports.

It almost triples the Kentucky Derby crowd, which is its only rival.

The most popular, it is the most criticized. Yet it is the only sports event which produces a utilitarian result.

Out of the two and a half miles of brick track at Indianapolis have come most of the gadgets which make your comfortable car work as it does.

Carburetors, pistons, spark plugs, valves, the front-wheel drive, connecting rods, steering gear, gasoline economy—and tires—all were improved by the Iron Derby.

A dozen years ago I saw my first Iron Derby. That year there were at least one or two changes of tires by every driver. One could watch the tires and see, after 200 miles, a thin white line that appeared in the center of the tire.

Today a tire change is relatively rare. One set of tires will last out the whole race. They are specially built. But things learned at Indianapolis have benefitted the entire tire industry.

THE POINTING FINGER.

This year there was a place waiting for me in the pits with Pete de Paolo, the little Italian who was twice world's speed champion and who this year is managing a driver.

For at least one reason I am glad engagements prevented attending this year's race. The day before the race can be a grisly one if one stays around the garages.

All day long, on the day before the race, the drivers sit there and tear down and rebuild the motors and parts of their cars.

They are as clean and as shining as the works of a watch—these motors. They go over them again and again because failure in any one part means loss in the race. That's the least it can mean. It can mean death.

Once, while at the garages the day before the race, I was with a man who watched the little groups of men working on the motors.

"This is awful," he said. "You can almost imagine that invisible death is stalking around here pointing a bony finger at this boy and that, marking him for tomorrow."

Some psychologists say the morbid thought of a possible crash draw many people to the race. Perhaps, but I think it is the sensation of speed and the spectacle of speed that draws most of them there. The morbid mind is worth a thought. It causes people to choke the street with traffic before a house where murder has been done; to jam the highways leading to where some plane has crashed or to where a train has wrecked.

"IT CAN'T HAPPEN TO ME."

The good drivers will look at you in astonishment if you question them as to the danger.

"It can't happen to me. I'm watching things," they say. There is an exciting quality to the work in the pits. Great blackboards held aloft bear code messages or straight ones. The driver gets them. He has signals as to gas, tires or repairs.

Powder puffs are a part of the equipment. The drivers have them strapped to their wrists. A quick swipe of a large powder puff will remove grime and sweat from the face. There isn't time for a handkerchief.

The bumping of the 500 miles of speed on bricks, is one of the most severe physical tests exacted by any sport. It perhaps is the most severe. No football player takes that much beating. It lasts for more than four hours.

It's a great show—the greatest this country has. There isn't any argument about that. On last Saturday they had left only general admission and standing room. There should be close to 200,000 people there today when the big field roars down the stretch and hits that first turn.

BEN BROWN IN SHAPE.

Ben Brown, the Atlanta boy who is one of the best middleweights in the game, turned in his last tough workout yesterday before his fight here Tuesday night with Ray Lyle.

Brown knocked out a couple of sparring partners in a workout at the J. P. C. and appeared in perfect shape. The fight Tuesday night is the best one Atlanta has had an opportunity to see since the days when the late W. L. Stribling was fighting.

Frank Speer, who promotes the fight at the ball park, plans to bring in more fighters if this bout goes as anticipated. The return of fighting to Atlanta would add much to the summer program of sports.

1914-1937.

While Bitsy Grant, Don Budge and Company were removing Australia from further Davis Cup competition a strange thing, indeed, was taking place in Paris—ENGLAND and GERMANY, represented by Bunny Austin and Heinrich Henkel, respectively, were playing for the tennis championship of FRANCE.

And Herr Henkel won. We've come a long way since 1914 when another German team was trying to win the championship. That team was stopped at the Marne. Perhaps there's something to this idea of sports fostering peace after all.

WORST AND NEXT TO WORST.

The worst and next to the worst softball teams played yesterday with the next-to-worst beating the worst, 15 to 1. The Constitution team, which won, is next to worst, and the Associated Press team decidedly the worst. Formed entirely for recreation and exercise, the teams attract a gallery comprised largely of wives who sit in the stands and wonder why they ever married such terrible athletes as appear before them.

The umpiring also was terrible. Your old partner ought to know. He was the umpire.

Coyne, Vallebona In Cotton States

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 30.—(P)—The tennis-playing Hendrix brothers, from Florida, Art and John, head the group of foreign entrants in the annual Cotton States tennis tournament which gets under way tomorrow.

Lila Porter, Mobile, is not expected to defend her women's title. Etta Taylor Coyne, former city and stat champion, and Gladys Vallebona, present state titleholder, will represent Atlanta in the women's matches.

WINS AUTO RACE.

BERLIN, May 30.—(P)—The German driver, Hermann Lang, piloting a Mercedes Benz, today won the international automobile race at Berlin's Avus track, traveling 154.83 kilometers (about 96 miles) in 35.3 minutes. His average speed was 261.7 kilometers (162.6 miles) per hour.

AMERICANS WIN WITHOUT LOSS OF SINGLE SET

Budge and Mako Defeat Crawford, McGrath, 7-5, 6-1, 8-6.

By ALAN GOULD.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., May 30.—(P)—The United States completed the rout of Australia's ailing Davis cup tennis forces today by romping off with the doubles match, thereby making it three straight and settling the outcome of the North American zone final.

Gene Mako - Donald Budge

nals without the loss of a single set.

The dynamic California combination of Don Budge and Gene Mako whipped Jack Crawford and Vivian McGrath, 7-5, 6-1, 8-6, in a match that was more one-sided than the scores indicated and which furnished few thrills for a crowd of scarcely 5,000 spectators in the West Side Club's stadium.

Following yesterday's decisive singles conquests by Budge over Crawford and Bryan (Bitsy) Grant over the young Australian substitute, Jack Bromwich, today's victory made the score 3-0 in America's favor and clinched this country's right to play the European zone winner, probably Germany, for the right to challenge the cup-holding British, whom this year of the great Fred Perry's services.

FINAL SINGLES TODAY.

Two singles matches will conclude the series tomorrow, with Budge opposing Bromwich and Grant meeting Crawford, but they can affect nothing but the final score.

America's three successive triumphs, all gained in straight-set fashion in two days of competition, not only clinched the series with unexpected ease but put a dismal finishing touch to Australia's hard-luck campaign. Minus the services of their ace, Adrian Quist, because of illness and with McGrath himself barely off the sick list, the Aussies came half way around the world only to find themselves too badly handicapped to cope with this country's youthful forces.

Favored less than a fortnight ago to repeat their triumph of a year ago, gained by a 3-2 margin, the Australians turned out to be hopelessly off-form and outclassed. Not only was their pre-battle sick list heavy but it developed, once play started, that the veteran Crawford no longer possessed either the speed, the confidence or the shots to keep pace with his American rivals. The one-time world champion, on both days, was only a memory of the player who swept all before him a few years ago.

HOPE BRIGHTER.

America's Davis cup hopes have been assumed brighter hue than at any time since the great Bill Tilden and, subsequently, Ellsworth Vines turned from amateur to professional ranks.

Led by the brilliant Budge, this country's team will leave Saturday for Europe and the final stages of a campaign that patriots hope will restore the classic cup to American hands after a 10-year lapse. The inter-zone finals will be played in mid-July at Wimbledon and the challenge round a week later.

Budge and Mako, eager to avenge the setback they absorbed last year at the hands of the Australians, dominated the doubles match with their forceful shotmaking at every critical stage.

ANZACS THREATEN.

The Australian pair looked threatening only twice during a generally desultory contest. They led, 3-1, in the first set. They also were within a point of saving the third set when they rallied to lead, 6-5, in games and 40-30 against Budge's service but they were quickly frustrated on each occasion. Otherwise they were no match for the young Californians in any vital department of play.

In an exhibition doubles, Frank Parker, member of the American cup squad, paired with Gregory Manging, of Newark, N. J., to beat the young Californians, Wayne Sabin and Bobby Riggs, 3-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Henkel Wins French Title.

PARIS, May 30.—(P)—Heinrich Henkel, Germany's No. 2 player, crowned his quick rise to tennis stardom today when he defeated Henry W. (Bunny) Austin, of England, 6-1, 6-4, 6-3, to capture the French hardcourt singles tennis championship. He succeeds his Davis cup teammate, Baron Gottfried Von Cramm, who did not defend the title he won last year from Fred Perry.

Perifox U. S. Hope In Epsom Classic

LONDON, May 30.—(P)—Twenty-one colts and one filly, bred in three countries, will try conclusions Wednesday in the most colorful of England's turf classics, the 158th running of the Epsom Derby.

Three favorites for the mile and a half race over the tricky Epsom turf represent as many nations—Le Ksar from France, the American-bred Perifox, owned by William Woodward, and Lord Astor's Cash Book, England's chief hope.

GRANT PROMISES HE WILL BEAT HEINER HENKEL

Americans See Germany as Foe; Sproule Picks U. S. Team.

By PAUL MICKELSON, NEW YORK, May 30.—(P)—Bitsy Grant parked himself in the dressing room as Don Budge and Gene Mako trooped in with the clinching point over Australia under their belts. He congratulated them warmly and then shook his head.

"After asking for it for five years, I've got it all right," said the Mighty Atom from Atlanta. "I'm right on the spot and if I miss it's going to break my heart."

FIGURES GERMANY. Bitsy began talking about the European zone finals of the Davis cup, figuring Germany, not England, was the big barrier in America's way to recovering the big silver trophy, emblem of international tennis team supremacy.

"My heart's been busted five years in a row by not getting a chance on the team," Bitsy rattled on. "I succeeded in winning my singles yesterday because I knew I had to win. Now I suppose I've got to meet Henkel (Heinrich Henkel, of Germany) and all I can say is that I'll trim that guy if it's the last thing I do."

"Von Cramm? Budge can have him and welcome. It's great to have a fellow like Budge running interference for you. I don't think there is any doubt but what Don can beat any amateur tennis player alive, so it seems it's up to me. And I asked for it."

For probably the first time since he was 18 years old, Bitsy refused a cigarette. An offer of a drink caused him to lift up his hands and walk away.

LIKES AMERICANS.

Clifford Sproule, non-playing captain of the Australian team, which came half-way around the world to lose in straight sets and matches to the surprising American team, figured the Americans would be too strong for either the Germans or English.

Maybe the "old mug" is about to come back where it started from.

M'SPADEN BOWS TO BOSTON STAR, ONE UP, 37 HOLES

Denny First Defending Champion in Eight Years To Repeat.

By JACK HENRY.

THE FIELD CLUB, PITTSBURGH, May 30.—(UP)—Slender Denny Shute, of Boston, the "Man of Steel," today retained his national P. G. A. championship with a spectacular 1-up victory over his New England neighbor, 28-year-old Harold (Jug) McSpaden. The match carried to the 37th hole.

The cold-blooded Shute underwent another terrific strain upon his nerves, but passed the test to become the first to repeat as P. G. A. champion since the veteran Leo Diegel turned the trick at Los Angeles in 1929.

BIG ADVANTAGE.

Shute opened the afternoon round with a three-hole advantage and was immediately installed as an odds-on favorite to polish off the ex-Kansas City caddy. The "wise" money boys underestimated McSpaden, and instead of coasting in, Shute was forced to make another of his famous stretch drives to win.

McSpaden set the course afire over the first nine of the afternoon with a par-cracking 34, which gave him a 1-up edge going to the final turn. Shute wavered for the first time in the tournament as McSpaden, seeing an opportunity that comes but once in a lifetime, blazed through to build his edge to 2-up with only three holes to go.

At this point, however, Shute turned on the heat. He righted his game, batted the even longer 35th as McSpaden cracked under the strain, and then halved the 36th when McSpaden's four-foot putt for a birdie on the home carpet missed by inches.

The gods of chance smiled upon Shute on the crucial 36th, where McSpaden needed only to sink a four-foot putt to win. But the pressure was terrific. McSpaden clearly showed its effect as he nervously addressed the ball in view of 5,000 spectators. Suddenly his composure was shattered by the grinding of movie cameras.

McSpaden walked away from the ball and pleaded with the officials to order the cameras stopped. The request was granted, but McSpaden was badly shaken. He missed the putt and with it his best chance to dethrone the quiet-spoken Boston professional.

ANOTHER HAZARD.

Shute still faced another hazard. It was the extra hole, the No. 1 hole, which has proved particularly troublesome for the defending champion throughout the tourney. Seldom has he solved it for better than a 5 and twice earlier in today's match he lost it to his younger rival.

But Shute split the fairway with a 250-yard drive, landed on the green with his second some 30 feet away from the pin. His long approach putt rolled to a

'Favored' for Rhett Butler Role

Ted Husing Names Bitsy After Hearing Him Talk.

By JACK TROY.

Ted Husing, nationally known sports announcer, yesterday nominated Bryan Grant Jr. for the role of Rhett Butler in Margaret Mitchell's brilliant novel, "Gone With the Wind," which is to be portrayed on the silver screen.

"After listening to you-all talk," Husing said, "I feel sure, Bitsy, that you have more than enough of that southern atmosphere to win the role."

Bitsy, introduced to the radio audience as the Atlanta Atom and the Georgia Grasshopper, gave his impressions of yesterday's double victory by the Americans which clinched the Australian series.

"I thought Jack Crawford, a truly fine player, was not on his game," he said. "Gene Mako, pairing with Don Budge, the greatest amateur player, came through in great fashion. He played the best tennis of the match, I thought."

SEES CUP RETURN.

Grant said that he thought the American team had an excellent chance to win back the Davis cup.

"We have Budge for the singles, Mako and Budge for the doubles. I hope to be able to do my part."

There was a wire from Grant yesterday.

"Through you would like to thank everyone in Atlanta for the telegrams congratulating me. I sincerely appreciate them and it helped a lot. Budge played great tennis and I fought my heart out. Please thank everyone for me for their kindness.

"BRYAN GRANT JR."

Husing mentioned the tremendous number of telegrams Mr. Grant's boy, Bitsy, had received. "Bitsy is being swamped with messages of congratulations," he declared.

POPULAR RESPONSE.

All of which goes to show the popular response to his being named to the team after all these years and the fact that Grant came through in such brilliant style.

It made the dear old U. S. L. T. A. look pretty bad. But, after all, what hasn't?

Grant no longer is their problem child. And they, perhaps, are having a hard time explaining why he was benched in favor of the aging Wilmer Allison last year.

SMOKIES RALLY TO TAKE OPENER IN TEN INNINGS

Beckman Fails in Relief Role; Lindsey Shelled in Nightcap.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 30.—Knoxville's rising Smokies clouted often and timely here today to take a double victory from the Atlanta Crackers. It took the Smokies 10 innings to win an uphill decision in the first game, 10 to 9, but they made easy work of the nightcap, winning, 8 to 3.

Atlanta sent base hits all over the ball park in the opening game but they couldn't take advantage of scoring opportunities. The Crackers smashed 18 hits in this game, but saw 15 men left stranded.

But, the Crackers bats were very humble in the second. They could get but four hits off the combined hurling of three Knoxville pitchers. But, at that, Atlanta had enough scoring chances to win. Eight Crackers were given free tickets to first base. The Crackers scored twice in the fourth inning but did so without a hit. Four passes and an error were counted for the scores.

BECKMAN LOSES.

Bill Beckman, former Knoxville hurler, was chiefly responsible for the Crackers' defeat. Beckman went in as a relief hurler in the 10th inning of the first game. He walked the first batsman eyed when the next sent a ground ball and then hit the third. The fourth batsman, Frank Bandy, then lined a single to left-center that drove in the winning run.

Jim Asbell, former New York Giant and lately of the Jersey City club, smacked two home runs, while Bill Adair got one. Luby hit one for Atlanta.

Frank Hudson, rookie star, received credit for both victories by his relief hurling incidentally the wins were the first Hudson has ever made in professional baseball.

More than 4,000 fans turned out for the double bill.

The teams meet again tomorrow. Maltzberger will be the starting hurler for Atlanta, while Paul Kadow will draw the hurling assignment for the Smokies.

CARDS DEFEATED BY PIRATES, 7 - 4; CUBS BEAT REDS

Defeat Drops Gashouse Gang to Fourth Place; Bees Win.

By the United Press.

The New York Giants' winning streak was stopped at eight straight yesterday when they were defeated, 6-3, by Jimmy Wilson's Phillies. Home runs by Camilli, Grace and Klein paved the way for the Philadelphia team.

Wayne LaMaster held the National league champions to five hits and no runs until the ninth, when he weakened and was relieved by Jorgens, who halted the rally after the Giants had scored their three runs in the eighth.

It was the eighth straight home run of the year for New York. Gumbert, who lasted six innings, was charged with the loss.

The leading Pirates hammered four St. Louis pitchers for 12 hits to score a 4-0 decision over the Cardinals. The Bucs hit Ray Harrell off the mound with a three-run attack in the first inning before he could retire a batter. Bill Swift scattered nine hits for his fourth win. Waner hit for the circuit for Pittsburgh; Moore for St. Louis.

The loss dropped the Cards into fourth place behind the Chicago Cubs, who mounted a notch by stopping the Cincinnati Reds, 7-1. Larry French dealt out but four hits to win his first game of the season. The Reds hit Reds their eighth straight defeat.

The Boston Bees buried Brooklyn under a 20-hit attack to win, 11-4. It was an eight-run rally in the seventh, featured by Gene Moore's home run and triple, that gave the Bees a lead-off and gave Boston the game. Tommie Searles hit four times—two doubles and two singles—in five attempts.

Mickey Martin, Mate Injured at Lakewood

Mickey Martin, famous auto daredevil, and Doggie Artiff, clowning member of Martin's "Hell Riders" were painfully injured yesterday afternoon at Lakewood park while performing their daring stunts before 13,000 persons at Lakewood.

Martin suffered bruises of his arm when he attempted to purposely turn over an automobile and Artiff received a badly sprained back while driving one of the automobiles in the head-on collision act.

Both were rushed to Grady hospital and were dismissed late last night after being given treatment.

Artiff was reported in good condition last night while Martin's arm was believed to have been fractured.

One of the largest crowds ever to witness a performance of any kind at Lakewood park watched the "Hell Riders" stage their daring show.

The American Legion officials, sponsors of the exhibition, may try to arrange for the "Hell Riders" to put on another show at Lakewood track next Sunday.

Lyle, who has been in town two days, is one of the toughest foes Brown has met. Lyle has fought in 210 fights and has yet to be knocked out. His last victory was 10 nights ago at Miami when he knocked out Percy Watson, who had won a string of 48 fights.

Frank Speer, the promoter, insisted on a tough opponent for Brown in bringing the fight game back to Atlanta and he has one who is given an excellent chance to stop Atlanta man, who has become something of a sensation.

Thirty-four rounds of boxing are on the Tuesday night card. Speer will have no wrestling rematch this week, putting on the fight card in its stead.

Lyle and Brown will engage in road work today and will be in perfect shape for the gong on Tuesday night. Lyle is accompanied to Atlanta by his manager, George Gable, and W. H. Peoples, Miami promoter.

SENATOR ADVOCATES SURVEY OF UNEMPLOYED BY CITIZENS' BODY

Bill Favorably Reported; Wage-Hour Act Ready for Hearing.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—(AP)—Senator Hatch, Democrat, New Mexico, disclosed today he will demand senate action Tuesday on a proposed top-to-bottom investigation of unemployment by a special "citizens' commission."

The bill—favorably reported by the senate education and labor committee—calls for a $500,000 allocation from relief funds to finance an inquiry into the causes and possible remedies of unemployment and into methods of handling relief.

The survey would be conducted by a commission of from 5 to 15 prominent citizens selected by the President. One of the initial tasks, Hatch said, would be to make the first official estimate of the number of unemployed.

Senator Clark, Democrat, Missouri, acting chairman of a commerce subcommittee, said he expected to open hearings early this week on another labor bill. The measure, introduced by Senator Maloney, Democrat, Connecticut, would establish a flexible work week, in which the hours of labor would vary with the extent of unemployment.

Under Maloney's proposal the legal work week would range from 30 hours when more than 8,000,000 persons are unemployed to 40 hours when unemployment totals only 2,000,000 or less.

The extent of illness would be determined by periodic censuses, directed by a national unemployment commission.

Business establishments damaged included the Cleghorn Department store, Waters' Radio shop, Yancey Implement Company and Myrtle's Beauty shop. The Cleghorn building, a two-story brick structure, was one of the city's oldest buildings, having been built nearly 50 years ago.

The scientists, Ivan Papanin, Pyotr Shirshov, Eugene Fedorov and Ernest Krenkel, have moved in and regard their new home, standing like a black speck against the white arctic waste, with pride and joy. It is the warmest tent in the world, for the walls and ceiling are stuffed with soft eiderdown.

The drift of the ice floe has slowed down.

P. Mazuruk, who landed his plane some 25 miles from the main camp, got in touch with us by radio. He reports that "everything is all right on our ice floe." His party is clearing a long runway for a takeoff.

The weather today is good, with the wind mild, visibility at 12 kilometers and the barometer rising. But from Rudolf island we learn that a violent snowstorm is raging there, with visibility at almost nothing and a high wind.
